Read Daniel 1-3.

In 605 B.C. Nebuchadnezzar became King of Babylon. He swept into Palestine and captured Jerusalem, taking many of Jerusalem’s wisest men and most beautiful women to Babylon as captives. Among this group were four young men—Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah—who found favor with the king and began to train for royal service.

Nebuchadnezzar attempted to force these young men to assimilate into the Babylonian culture and to transfer their loyalty from Judah’s God to Babylon’s many false gods. He first changed their names to Belteshazzar, Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego—names that glorified the false gods that the Babylonians worshiped. In order to influence their lifestyle, they were offered food and wine from the king’s table, including meat that had been sacrificed to idols. Nebuchadnezzar also challenged the faith of Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego by ordering them to bow down and worship a golden statue.

Faced with the trials of living in a culture that did not honor God, these friends stood together in their resolve to obey God in spite of any consequences obedience might bring. They refused the tainted food and ate vegetables and drank water instead, adjusting to the culture without abandoning their convictions. And when the Babylonians bowed to the image of gold, Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego did the only thing that faithful believers in God could do. They disobeyed the king and suffered the consequence of being thrown into a blazing furnace.

These men did not know if God would rescue them from the fire, but they knew where they would draw the line. They would not bow down and worship any god but Yahweh. They knew God had power to deliver them, and they were determined to be faithful to him whether or not he intervened on their behalf.

We may never be in a jam as desperate as Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego’s, but we will all face difficult times when our faith is tried. These times may be painful and may not turn out as we plan. Like Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, we need be prepared to say, “If he rescues me, or if he doesn’t, I will serve only God.”

“Fear not, for I have redeemed you; I have [called] you by name; you are mine. When you pass through the waters, I will be with you... When you walk through the fire, you will not be burned.” Isaiah 43:1b-2
Introduction to Faith in the Furnace

Have the students sit on the floor in front of you.

Our story today takes place during a dark and difficult time in Israel’s history. The king of Judah, King Zedekiah, was a wicked king. He did not honor the Lord or his laws. God grew increasingly angry at the evil this king brought to Jerusalem, so he allowed the Babylonians to defeat Judah.

One by one, the towns in Judah were captured by the Babylonians, until only Jerusalem, the capital, remained. Then Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, came to Jerusalem with his army, set up camp around the city, and laid siege to it for the next two years.

The people of Jerusalem were prisoners inside their own city. Since no one could go into or out of the city, it wasn’t long before there was no food to eat and the people suffered greatly. As if that weren’t bad enough, the Babylonian army broke through the walls and invaded the city. Then Nebuchadnezzar gathered the survivors, including the craftsmen and young men and women of the nobility, and took them back to Babylon with him. However, he left some of the poorest people behind so that they could take care of the vineyards and plow the fields. Over 4,600 people were taken from Judah as captives to Babylon. This period in Israel’s history is called their “exile.”

Among those taken into exile were four young men about 15 or 16 years old. Their names were Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah. Daniel’s name is probably familiar to you. The other three are better known as Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego. For three years, these friends were trained to enter government service. But when things in Babylon went against the laws of Israel’s God, these young men determined to remain loyal to the Lord. Listen closely as you hear how Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego made a difficult decision.
Read Daniel 3 from a kid-friendly version of the Bible, so the kids can hear the story straight from the source.

From poster board, make nine squares and stick them to the wall or dry-erase board with Fun-Tak®. To each square, attach an envelope made from a sheet of card stock folded in half and labeled with one of the following titles: Shadrach, Meshach, Abednego, King Nebuchadnezzar, Fiery Furnace, The Lord, Statue, Faith, and History.

In each envelope, place three questions from the list below.

Form two teams: Team X and Team O.

Select a captain at random for each team. Perhaps choose the person whose birthday is the closest to today’s date. The captain is the spokesperson for the team, but the team must confer to make decisions and answer questions.

Flip a coin to decide which team will begin.

Before playing, explain to the kids the object and rules of the game.

You want to be the first team to get three Xs or three Os in a row. The three Xs or Os can be horizontal, vertical or diagonal. Players earn the right to get their X or O on a square by correctly answering the question posed to them by the host. Opposing teams can “steal” the square if they answer a question correctly that the first team has answered incorrectly.

The first team will select a name from the board and the host will choose a question from that envelope. You heard all the answers to all the questions in the Bible reading and in what I told you at the beginning of class.
After the question is read, your team needs to talk over the answer. Then the team captain can tell your answer to the host. If your team answers correctly, you may place an X or O for your team on the board above the envelope.

Be sure to correct any incorrect answers given and add detail from the Scripture passage and introduction as necessary. Remember that the point of the game is the truth of the Word, not just the fun of competition. After Team 1 has a turn, repeat the process for Team 2.

If a team is trying to block the opposing team’s efforts to get three in a row, they must say, “Shadrach (for example) for the block,” indicating that they are blocking their opponent. If a team has one square left to win, they must say, “History (for example) for the win.” After all of the squares have been played, if neither team has three in a row, the winning team is the one with the most Xs or Os on the board.

If time allows, you may play as many rounds as you have questions. Award prizes to both teams.
