No Pens Day Wednesday

7 October 2015

Put down your pens and pick up your language!

Activity Pack

Your guide to running the day
Welcome to your No Pens Day Wednesday activity pack

No Pens Day Wednesday encourages schools to put down their pens and pick up their language by spending one day focusing on learning through speaking and listening.

Thank you for signing up and getting involved.

Contents

All about No Pens Day Wednesday _____________________________ 3
Spoken language matters ____________________________________ 4
No Pens Day Wednesday... it's over to you _______________________ 6
Keep it fun __________________________________________________ 8
Keep it relevant ______________________________________________ 10
Keep it linked to writing ______________________________________ 12
Keep collecting impact ________________________________________ 14
Keep on sharing ______________________________________________ 16
Getting ready for the day _____________________________________ 17
Support with running your No Pens Day Wednesday ______ 18
Evaluating the day ___________________________________________ 23
Spread the word ______________________________________________ 25
The Communication Commitment _____________________________ 26
Other work to support you in your school______________________ 28
No Pens Day Wednesday is a national speaking and listening event organised by The Communication Trust. The Trust is a coalition of over 50 not-for-profit organisations with expertise in speech, language and communication, who support the children’s workforce to develop the skills of the children they work with.

2015 is the fifth year of No Pens Day Wednesday and the event has never been more popular – so far over 3,600 schools and settings signed up to take part. Last year we included for the first time resources for early years settings and also special schools – from nursery to secondary, mainstream to specialist settings, more than one and a quarter million pupils took part!

So, with so many teachers and pupils now aware of No Pens Day Wednesday and the fantastic impact it can have in school and beyond, this year it’s over to you! In 2015 we’re supporting schools and settings to share their brilliant ideas and approaches with others through our website. You can upload your own No Pens Day lesson plans and activity ideas and access those shared by others. All of our resources will still be available on the site as well as some new-for-2015 resources, but our main focus this year is to support you to share your creativity and passion for speaking and listening with schools and settings across the country and also to learn from them too.

If you haven’t already, simply register on our website to access all the available resources and to share your own www.thecommunicationtrust.org.uk/nopensdaywednesday

Just a note... If Wednesday 7th October doesn’t work for your school, you can run your No Pens Day at any time and as often as you like - last year one school even decided to extend the activities over a week with ‘surprise’ no pens lessons incorporated throughout the school day. The resources stay available on our website throughout the year.

2015 Activity Pack

All about No Pens Day Wednesday
Speech, language and communication skills are essential for all children and young people in school, at home and beyond. Yet we know that many are struggling to develop these skills – SLCN is the most prevalent special educational need in primary schools and employers are reporting a lack of basic communication skills in young people looking for work.

Schools and settings are required to support spoken language skills in a number of ways through national policy.

- The new national curriculum requires spoken language to be integrated across all subjects and age ranges, but is less prescriptive than it used to be about what this should look like.

- The new SEND Code of Practice which came into effect in September 2014 highlights communication and interaction as one of the four broad areas of need that schools and settings are required to plan for.

- Involving children and young people in decision making is a policy priority and is absolutely central to the SEND reforms and wider practice change in the children’s workforce. The first step to meaningful involvement and participation is effective communication.

- Communication and language is one of the three prime areas of the Early Years Foundation Stage (EYFS) and children’s skills in this area are seen as key indicators for school readiness.

- Teachers’ standards require teachers to ‘have a clear understanding of the needs of all pupils’; they’re required to be aware of pupils’ developmental stages, adapt teaching to support them at these different stages and demonstrate an understanding of and take responsibility for promoting high standards of literacy and articulacy.

- No Pens Day Wednesday can support all of these requirements. Schools and settings who’ve taken part before report significant impact from the day and what’s more... they loved it!
In the Evaluation of No Pens Day Wednesday 2014:

- 80% of respondents said that taking part in No Pens Day Wednesday raised their awareness of pupil’s speech, language and communication needs.

- 95% said they’d do things differently around school as a result of their involvement, with almost 60% saying they’d run more regular No Pens Days.

- One in five respondents reported they identified pupils who were struggling with spoken language that they had not identified before.

- Many of the respondents noted that as a result of taking part in NPDW they not only noticed pupils’ improved communication skills, but also improvements in their writing and engagement in lessons.

"All the children were very engaged in the activities of the day. We found that they engaged very well with each other and across peer groups... was highly successful in sparking conversation and debate. This was followed up the next day by written work and drawings as the children had been so excited. Parents told us that their children had relayed the events of the day to them with enthusiasm!"

"Staff were surprised at the level of high quality communication taking place. It gave the opportunity to work across key stages and to provide parents with some meaningful information"

"Staff have been made more aware of children who require more support in this area. It has also made teaching staff aware of ideas and activities that can support these children."

"Staff were surprised at the level of high quality communication taking place. It gave the opportunity to work across key stages and to provide parents with some meaningful information"
No Pens Day Wednesday in 2015... It’s over to you

"In the future, it would be fantastic if The Trust created a way of allowing schools to share resources and lesson plans with one another - this would help build relationships between schools and would really take the initiative to the next level!"

No Pens Day Wednesday supports schools and settings to put down their pens and pick up their language to support pupils’ communication skills and also to support schools and teachers to meet the requirements outlined earlier. However, we know from the fantastic feedback we’ve had from previous events that teachers are keen to use No Pens Day as an opportunity to really showcase their existing skill and knowledge around supporting spoken language in the classroom. That’s why this year it’s over to you. We want to enable teachers and school staff who have great ideas and effective lesson plans to share them with us through No Pens Day Wednesday via our website - then we can share them with the rest of the world!

The process couldn’t be simpler:

▪ If you haven’t already, register to take part at www.thecommunicationtrust.org.uk/nopensdaywednesday

▪ Visit the ‘share your resources’ page and find out more. You can share: lesson plans and ideas for activities, assemblies and engaging parents plus lots of other information for staff.

▪ Read and agree to the terms of use, then complete the short online form to upload your resource.

▪ Your resource will then be viewed by a member of The Communication Trust’s professional team to ensure it’s No Pens Day Wednesday friendly before being shared on our website page

▪ Your resource will appear on the site for other registered No Pens Day Wednesday users to freely access!

The Communication Trust
Every child understood
Over the next few pages you will find some really useful ideas and tips to help you make the most of No Pens Day Wednesday in your school or setting. Our professional team share their ideas and also build on what we know schools and settings who’ve taken part have found most exciting and effective throughout the day.

We’ll explore the following themes for early years, primary, secondary and specialist settings –

- Keep it fun
- Keep it relevant
- Keep linking it to writing
- Keep collecting impact
- Keep on sharing
No Pens Day Wednesday is a great opportunity to be really innovative and creative across the curriculum.

"The difference in the children was amazing - learning without really realising it and enjoying it!"

"The pupils had fun and teachers realised how their lessons could be different, more engaging and still teach the objective."

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Early Years</th>
<th>Primary</th>
<th>Secondary/Further</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Think about the resources you already have within the classroom and how these can be used to bring the day to life. Puppets, props, role play and dress up provide the perfect opportunity for children to be active in conversation.</td>
<td>Think about how a morning assembly could be used to trigger lots of enthusiasm and ideas for the day.</td>
<td>Think about the interests of the young people and how they could be included in the day. Consider getting the students actively involved in sharing their ideas for activities and planning.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>How could you use musical instruments to accompany activities?</td>
<td>How could music and movement be incorporated?</td>
<td>Would they enjoy a poetry slam contest or verbal debates?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Are there ways that more reluctant speakers could be encouraged to join in? e.g. children take turns to be the ‘voice’ for a toy/character</td>
<td>How can the oral traditions of retelling stories and poems be used in the day?</td>
<td>Could you use interesting video clips to spark discussion?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>How could parents be involved?</td>
<td>Would the children enjoy being part of a ‘human graph’ as part of a maths lesson?</td>
<td>How could you use improvisation to re-enact a historical event?</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

---

"The Communication Trust
Every child understood"
Specialist Settings

- How could you use art, imagery, poems and stories to bring activities to life?
- How could you use listening activities in small groups to support discussion and collaboration?
- Will the students enjoy having more of a focus on listening and being listened to?

There is a wealth of information and practical tips/activities on the No Pens Day Wednesday website to inspire you in how to use speaking and listening activities in a fun and engaging way across the day. Have a look at the lesson plans and don’t forget to look at the case studies and evaluations too, as these include little nuggets of inspiration for a really enjoyable day for adults and children.

No Pens Day Wednesday is a real opportunity to try something a bit different and have lots of fun!
No Pens Day Wednesday is not just a ‘one off’ occasion to think about speaking and listening. It’s a great opportunity to really focus on communication skills and see how they are relevant for all lessons across the curriculum and throughout the year. It’s a chance to demonstrate and celebrate how the spoken word can really enhance learning and engagement. Helping pupils, parents and staff be aware of the wider relevance of the day should be an important part of your planning.

"... we would strongly recommend taking a subject themed approach. It ensured that our day was both focused and fun, and it meant that in addition to improving speech, language and communication, we were able to address other issues that were important to us as a school"

For Children

- Help the children to see how the day fits into what they have already been learning by clearly linking it to previous and future lessons. For example using a book or text that the children are familiar with or are studying.
- Keep any of your notes or recordings of discussions that you may have made on the day - use them for future reference and discussion in other lessons throughout school.

For Young People

- Older students are often very focussed on the ‘note taking’ aspect of school work especially if they are preparing for exams and assessments. Get them to discuss the importance of spoken language skills and the impact of having more time to prepare for written work in this way, both before and after the day. Did it help them to have more time to explore ideas?
- How are communication skills important in interviews or the workplace, in relationships and life? You could even consider role playing some of these scenarios so they can see exactly how useful being able to ‘think on your’ feet can be!
For Parents

- Make sure they are aware of the day and do ask for their feedback and input. Share with them materials that the children produced on the day (physically or by photo or video) and make clear how this links to work the children subsequently produce.

- Use letters, websites or other means of communication to let them know all about the day - we have lots of resources to support you to share information about No Pens Day Wednesday with your parents on our resources pages.

For Staff

- When planning for the day, think about how No Pens Day Wednesday links to your school development plan or individual priorities.

- Consider planning collaboratively and in groups to really make the activities as relevant as possible.

- Consider a ‘subject themed’ approach if this would be useful for your setting. One school last year planned all its No Pens Day Wednesday activities around scientific vocabulary and it was a great success!

"Giving the children a voice made us appreciate that they need to be listened to for longer periods of time. They talked more confidently to their peers by the end of the day, knowing that there was plenty of time for talk, that they weren't being assessed and that everyone’s voice was important"
Although we want everyone to put down their pens for the day and really focus on how we can use spoken language to support learning, it’s important to keep in mind how this all links to written work and how incorporating these skills to your everyday planning beyond No Pens Day Wednesday can have a real impact.

Schools and settings who have taken part before have regularly highlighted the impact the day has on children and young people’s written work.

Early Years
- You could introduce important ideas or content and ‘set the scene’ for something before the day, so that children have had the opportunity to become familiar with key vocabulary or concepts.
- You could extend activities from the day in to future lessons. Are the children inspired to make up a song or a rhyme based on the art work they made? They could draw a picture about their best bit of No Pens Day, or think more about some of the sounds that they heard and talked about during a ‘sound trail’

Primary
- You could ask students to bring in materials from home in preparation for the day, and encourage them to write about potential No Pens Day activities that could make use of these materials. Last year one school encouraged students to plan and prepare visual PowerPoint presentations to share on the day on their interests/hobbies.
- You could also encourage pupils to produce extended pieces of writing after No Pens Day Wednesday based on activities they took part in on the day.

"We found that the day had a positive impact on the written work of the students following the event... In a subsequent assessment... a few of our children who were predicted level 5s at the start of the year attained level 7s, with some of them managing to write over four sides of writing! It seems that being able to verbalise and talk through some of the key points on No Pens Day meant that they had a clearer, more structured idea of what they wanted to write."
Secondary

- Again, think about how students could prepare for the day, for example by looking at examples of poems or writing a piece of poetry to use during a ‘slam poetry’ contest or by reading relevant articles for topics and activities.

- Following the day they could write up the results of a verbal debate or how they completed a maths problem.

- They could also be encouraged to write a reflection on their whole experience of No Pens Day Wednesday - what did they learn about communication? What did they learn about themselves?

Specialist

- Use lessons before the day to introduce any supporting resources for concepts, ideas or vocabulary that will be important for the activities. Introduce any relevant signs or symbols that are likely to be new or unfamiliar before the day and make these easily accessible and usable for children and staff. This way, pupils can really concentrate on communicating during the day rather than grappling with new ideas.

- If possible, following the day, encourage students to write about how the day went and how effectively they were able to communicate and share their ideas.

For Staff

- Use No Pens Day Wednesday as a chance to really reflect on how you use spoken language to support written work. Some staff have reported that they found it really reassuring to realise how much they already do this and they used the day to enhance their awareness and practice. Others said it gave them a chance to really explore new approaches and ideas which they will use again in the future.
Keep collecting impact

"Lots of fun, and we had to be innovative with the curriculum. Really brought out the best in our SEN children, and narrowed the gap in performance between all the groups."

It’s really important that you capture the impact of the day but when there is no ‘marking’ to be done it can be a challenge to know how to do it! Below are some ideas from schools that have previously taken part that you might want to consider:

Student’s voice
- Use a camera to capture photographs of the children during activities. Consider video or voice recorders to record what the children were able to say when they were just focusing on their talking.
- Towards the end of the pack, there are some questions which you could use to guide a discussion on pupils’ experiences of the day. One secondary school has used a big brother style ‘diary room’ to record their students’ thoughts and opinions on the day. What a great way to gather impact!

Discuss it
- Discuss both with the children and with staff members before and after the day.
- What did the children notice? Were they more relaxed or was it initially more nerve-wracking?
- Did staff notice any changes in pupil confidence or self esteem? Has it supported development of social skills? Some schools reported that it ‘narrowed the gap’ in performance for children with SEN - did you see any examples of this?
- Ask parents for reports of any feedback they received.

"Lots of fun, and we had to be innovative with the curriculum. Really brought out the best in our SEN children, and narrowed the gap in performance between all the groups."
Monitor it

- Although you need to put down your pen during the day please do write and record any results as soon as the day is over.
- What was pupil engagement like during the day?
- Was there any difference in the quality and depth of written work produced after the day due to the extra time given to discussion and preparation? Compare specific pieces of work so you can make an informed judgement.

Think about changes you would like to see in advance of the day and then see if your expectations were met. Were you able to more effectively evaluate your student’s speaking and listening skills afterwards?

Did you identify any difficulties and challenges that you were previously unaware of? Did some children surprise you with their abilities and strengths? Again, make sure to record any actions you undertake as a direct result of the day.

We are always collecting information on the impact of the day so please do share your evidence with us. You can do this by completing our case study template, sharing your thoughts through our evaluation survey or by getting in touch directly with us at enquiries@thecommunicationtrust.org.uk – we can always arrange a follow up phone call.

"Staff have been made more aware of children who require more support in this area. It has also made teaching staff aware of ideas and activities that can..."
Consistent feedback we get from schools who have taken part is how useful it is to share resources and ideas about No Pens Day Wednesday. This year we have some exciting new developments so please do get involved! There’s more information on page 4 of this pack.

Within school

- Consider group and collaborative planning for the day - it’s a great way to share innovation and particularly useful if you are considering a focus on one idea or subject area across certain year groups or the whole school. Some schools have used team development days or INSET to really develop and plan for No Pens Day Wednesday and their approach to speaking and listening as a whole.

- If you’ve taken part before, look at what worked well last time and consider any changes or developments you would like to make this time.

- Whether it’s your first time or you’ve run the day before, do look at the information provided on the website from other schools who have taken part - their experiences might be useful to help you shape ideas for your school’s participation.

- Some schools have also used group spreadsheets or displays to share lesson plans and ideas. If there is a staff shared area then this is a great place to collate practical suggestions and resources. Last year one school used it as an opportunity to share resources around signing and symbols with all staff across the school.

Between schools

- There were some great examples last year of schools using their positive experiences with No Pens Day Wednesday to spread the word to other schools within clusters or federation groups.

- Use your professional networks to share your good practice around spoken language so that more pupils than ever can get the opportunity to experience No Pens Day Wednesday.

- This year we are taking this one step further and inviting you to share your ideas and resources with other schools via our website (see Page 4) so please get involved and share your brilliant work!
Getting ready for the day

Over the next few pages there will be some really practical information to help you prepare for No Pens Day Wednesday - or Monday, Tuesday, Thursday or Friday if another day suits you better! These are just guidelines, so just adapt and add things to and make it relevant for you.

Visit the website and register

On our website at www.thecommunicationtrust.org.uk/nopensdaywednesday you can register to access all the resources we've developed and that schools have shared to help you run your No Pens Day Wednesday. You'll find lesson plans, activity ideas, assembly ideas, information for staff, information for parents, promotional materials and resources from our members.

Check out the resources

Once you’ve registered, there are lots of free resources for you to use. All the resources we've produced for the event since 2011 are available online, giving you a wide range to choose from across all settings, age ranges and subjects. This year, for the first time, you'll also be able to access resources shared by other schools and settings, as well as share your own – there’s more information about this on page 4.

From the central No Pens Day Wednesday page on our website, you'll be signposted to access all the available information and resources including the lesson plans, activity ideas and ideas for engaging parents. Each resource will include information about those that are produced by us, as well as a link (where available) to the resources shared by other schools and settings. It’s a really easy to use online resource bank and once you’ve registered, you can share the link with your colleagues so they can explore it for themselves too.

Make the resources your own and share your ideas

All of the resources that have been shared can be used as a starting point to springboard from, so you can build and adapt things to meet the needs of your pupils and your individual setting. And remember - if you've got examples of lesson plans, activity ideas or other resources that have worked well with your pupils, share them with others using the share your resources function on our website as outlined on page 4 of this pack.
Support with running your No Pens Day Wednesday

Three weeks before your No Pens Day Wednesday:

- Confirm who’ll lead on plans for the day
- Book in a staff meeting to inform other teachers about No Pens Day Wednesday
- Download the activity pack and other resources at www.thecommunicationtrust.org.uk/nopensdaywednesday
- Familiarise yourself with the available resources and consider how you might adapt them or if you’ll use them as they are. If you’ve created your own lesson plans or activity ideas – why not share them on our site for others to use?
- Decide on who’ll run the assembly for pupils
- Consider whether you’ll have competitions/presentations on the day to encourage the pupils to get involved – you can use our downloadable certificate to reward excellent work on the day
- If you would like to let your local newspaper or local T.V. news channel know you’re running a No Pens Day Wednesday then you can download press templates and a media advice toolkit from our website.
- If you plan to use or share photos of No Pens Day Wednesday, make sure you have the relevant permissions in place!
- Plan in reflection time after the day to look at lessons learned. What might your next steps be? How can you embed spoken language across your setting going forwards?
Two weeks before your No Pens Day Wednesday

☐ Ensure all teachers have discussed with their pupils the plans to participate in No Pens Day Wednesday, including seeking their views on taking part and asking their ideas on how the day should be run

☐ Ensure all staff are aware of the day and the reasons behind your decision to take part

☐ Identify ‘a budding photographer’ in your school or community who can take pictures of your No Pens Day Wednesday activity

☐ Send a letter to parents – we’ve provided a template for you to use on the website; you may decide to invite parents into the school assembly or to see what’s happening in the classrooms – we know parents often really enjoy being involved in No Pens Day Wednesday
One week before your No Pens Day Wednesday

☐ Plan the lessons you’ll run using the examples provided at www.thecommunicationtrust.org.uk/nopensdaywednesday

Ensure any additional resources you need are prepared. If you create new plans and activities, remember to share them with others through our website.

☐ Make sure you’ve thought about differentiation ideas for pupils who struggle with their speaking and listening and have included this information in your planning

☐ Put information in your newsletter for parents and in the news section of your website

☐ Take time to familiarise yourself with our case study template which you can find on our website so you can send in feedback and stories to us. We’re always keen to hear from schools and settings so please do get in touch.

☐ Plan where and when you’ll gather pupil views on the day; see our suggestions on how to do this on page 16

☐ As a staff team, think about the impact you’re hoping to evidence from No Pens Day Wednesday and ways you might be able to measure this. Consider using some of the methods mentioned on page 8

☐ Set up a blog or podcast that the teachers and pupils can access. Use this to share ideas about what you and other teachers are planning to do on the day, get the pupils’ views, share with other schools and look at ways to keep this going after the event.
2015 Activity Pack

On the day

☐ Begin with an assembly explaining to pupils what will happen on the day; you can download examples from www.thecommunicationtrust.org.uk/nopensdaywednesday - you might even want to ask the pupils to lead the assembly! Make sure you plan in time to support them with this beforehand.

☐ Send us a message on social media to let us know you’re taking part and keep us updated throughout the day on how things are going, include some of the best bits so our followers can share your fantastic practice – you can find us on Twitter @Comm_nTrust and on Facebook at www.facebook.com/communicationtrust

☐ Use the materials provided on our website to plan for your exciting No Pens Day Wednesday

☐ Note the impact on pupils’ engagement and learning. Ask pupils’ views during the day; discuss the benefits of not using pens, alternative activities used and places where it would be useful to write things down – ensure you capture these views by writing them down or recording them

☐ Plan a follow up assembly/sharing pupils’ work – you might chose to do this on another day/ invite parents etc

☐ If you have invited your local newspaper or T.V. news channel along for part of the day, nominate someone to be the ‘media person’ who will lead on liaising with local media and talk to them about what they need. For example, they may want to set up a specific photo with staff and children or talk to a child/teacher/parent about their views on the day

☐ We would love to see any photos or videos that you take on the day so we can show others how successful your No Pens Day Wednesday was. Please send to enquiries@thecommunicationtrust.org.uk – please remember that in order to share them, all photos and videos need to have full permissions.
After the day

- Present results / certificates at the end of week assembly
- Use a staff meeting to reflect on the best and most challenging elements of the day. Look back over the impacts you had hoped to see and how the day went – were there surprises? Did you achieve the impact you hoped for? Is there more you could do?
- Share pupils’ views with each other; see suggested approaches on page 16

- Decide on what you’ll continue with to take embedding spoken language across your school or setting more going forwards. You might want to take a look at our Communication Commitment resource to support you in this; see more information about this on page 18 – www.thecommunicationtrust.org.uk/commitment
- Complete our short evaluation survey which we’ll send round after the event to help let us know what went well and what could be improved
- Share your experiences with us using our case study template. Email your templates along with any photos you’re happy to share to enquiries@thecommunicationtrust.org.uk. We’re keen to add to our fantastic range of case studies from previous years and to the great work that’s happening!
- Update your blog if you started one with your thoughts about the day, how well the activities went, what you learnt and what the pupils thought
- Send a press release with a couple of the best pictures to your local media and any other important contacts. Please do also send them to us – enquiries@thecommunicationtrust.org.uk to help us keep track of the media activity
Evaluating the day

An important feature of No Pens Day Wednesday is the reflection it will prompt, from pupils, school staff and parents, particularly around what went well as well as what was less successful and what could happen differently next time. Including the views of children and young people is recognised good practice and is a specific focus of the reformed SEND system.

For pupils, opportunities could be provided throughout the day to ask their views about different lessons and activities. We also have resources available in the ‘information for staff’ section online that will be useful in thinking about this including a new-for-2015 pupil evaluation tool.

Pupil Voice

Here are some examples of questions that might be a useful starting point for evaluating what students think:

1. What did you most enjoy about No Pens Day and why? You could use examples and traffic lights/smiley faces to encourage pupils to judge which were best.

2. What was the most challenging part of the day? Why? Was there anything you would have liked to have been done differently? Why?

3. Were there times when you wanted to write things down? If so, when would that have been useful?

4. What do you think of this way of learning? Would you like your teachers to do more activities like this or less? Thumbs up or thumbs down?

5. Did you surprise yourself today in any way? What was your best success?

For teaching staff, we suggest some time is set aside to evaluate and share positive practice. This could be the starting point to plan next steps and to think about the bigger picture of how children’s speaking and listening skills can continue to be supported throughout the school.

Staff evaluation

Here are some examples of questions that might be useful to think about after the day.

1. What were the most challenging elements of the day?

2. What worked well – what activities, principles, lessons or approaches?

3. What were pupils’ views on the day?

4. What was the impact on learning, engagement and behaviour?

5. After the day, did you notice any impact the day had on pupils’ written work?

6. Did the day give you any new insights into particular pupils?
Choose elements of the day you'll use again, for example:

1. Try one new activity that you want to embed in your teaching

2. Target specific spoken language objectives in your planning going forwards and make it a focus of every lesson

3. As a staff team, perhaps it would be useful to use some time in staff meetings as an opportunity to discuss spoken language across the curriculum and to share practice.

This may be the first time you have taken part in No Pens Day Wednesday, or you may be a seasoned participant and have taken part in many No Pens Day Wednesdays before! Either way, we would love to know what you think. If you have any suggestions for ways we can improve No Pens Day Wednesday, please let us know at enquiries@thecommunicationtrust.org.uk
Spread the word

We’ve got lots of guidance and templates to help you spread the word, far and wide, about your No Pens Day Wednesday:

- Template letter for parents
- Flyers to send home to parents
- Posters to display around school
- Template press release
- No Pens Day Wednesday one pager
- eComms Toolkit
- Media Toolkit

All of these materials are available for you to access on our website – www.thecommunicationtrust.org.uk/nopensdaywednesday

Save the date!

The Communication Trust’s No Pens Day Wednesday 2015 will take place on Wednesday 7th October!

Go to our website and sign up now to access all the existing resources and be the first to find out about new for 2015 ones.

Put down your pens and pick up your language!

www.thecommunicationtrust.org.uk/nopensdaywednesday
By taking part in No Pens Day Wednesday, you are already well on your way to making a real commitment to speech, language and communication and SLCN in your school or setting. Lots of schools who have taken part in the day use it as a starting point to really put a spotlight on communication and the Communication Commitment is a fantastic tool that can help you to do this.

Evidence shows that the most effective way to embed really good practice to support communication development in our schools is to take a whole school approach. The Communication Commitment is a free resource which provides the structure, guidance and materials to enable you to do just that.

It provides everything you need to assess where you’re at currently, what key actions will take you forward and provides free resources to support you to achieve them. It then signposts you to our expert member organisations who offer accreditation and training programmes for settings that feel ready to invest further in their whole school approach. The Commitment was also updated in 2014 to include specific reference to ways it can support you to meet the requirements of the SEND Code of Practice and it’s a really practical way you can get to grips with the changes happening and prioritise communication for all pupils including those with SEN in your school.

You can find out more about the Commitment and register to take a look or get involved here – www.thecommunicationtrust.org.uk/commitment

"[The Commitment has] made the school more aware about improving language and communication for all - not just for those with SLCN - and more aware of how focussing on speech and language can have a wide ranging impact."
YOUR JOURNEY THROUGH THE COMMUNICATION COMMITMENT >>>>

1. SCHOOL LEADERSHIP
2. WORKFORCE DEVELOPMENT
3. COMMUNICATION - FRIENDLY SCHOOLS
4. SUPPORTING PUPILS WITH SLCN
5. ENGAGEMENT WITH PARENTS, FAMILIES OR EMPLOYERS

WHY?
It's free to register, you'll receive free resources and you'll be supporting all your pupils, including those with SLCN, to communicate better - part of the Ofsted Framework and preparing you for the SEND Reforms

STEP 1 Planning
- Build on Steps 1 and 2 and go further with our expert support
- Assess your starting point with the Commitment Review Checklist

STEP 2 Doing & Reviewing
- Choose your five actions
- Print and share your personalised Action Plan
- Find FREE guidance, advice and toolkits to complete your actions

STEP 3 Taking it forward
- Review Step 2 and challenge yourself with other actions
- Celebrate with your Certificate of Completion and Celebrating Communication Toolkit!
- Share Your Story with like-minded schools and learn from their experiences
- Record, reflect and review in your Progress Journal

Communication Commitment
Our other work to support you in your school

We have a wide range of resources and support which will help you to be aware of typical language development and to identify and support those who are struggling.

The Progression Tools aim to support teaching staff to identify children who may be struggling to develop their speech, language and communication skills.

The Progression Tools can also be used to track and monitor children’s speech, language and communication skills over time. They are now available across the age ranges from 3–18 and are one of our most popular resources.

To find out more and to order progression tools please go to www.thecommunicationtrust.org.uk/progressiontools.

Universally Speaking is a series of booklets for anyone who works with children and young people. The booklets show where children should be with their communication skills at any given age. You can use the booklets to find out whether the children you work with are on the right track, what helps them learn to talk and listen and what to do if you have concerns about any of their communication abilities.

To find out more and to download a free copy, go to www.thecommunicationtrust.org.uk/universallyspeaking.

What Works is a moderated virtual library of evidenced interventions that aim to support children’s speech, language and communication. What Works helps early years practitioners, teachers, school leaders, and speech and language therapists find the most appropriate interventions for children and young people by providing a free and easily accessible overview of the evidence base for each intervention. To find out more and register to use the site please go to www.thecommunicationtrust.org.uk/whatworks.

The Communication Commitment is an interactive website that supports schools to improve their whole school approach to communication. There’s more information on page 26 and on our website www.thecommunicationtrust.org.uk/commitment.

We are a Consortium of over 50 voluntary organisations who provide specialist expert support around speech, language and communication. Download our Catalogue which lists the products and services available from our Consortium. To download please go to www.thecommunicationtrust.org.uk/consortiumcatalogue.

Find out about more about our work at www.thecommunicationtrust.org.uk.
The Communication Trust is a coalition of over 50 voluntary and community organisations with expertise in speech, language and communication. We harness our collective expertise to support the children's workforce and commissioners to support all children and young people's communication skills, particularly those with speech, language and communication needs (SLCN).

We do this by raising awareness, providing information and workforce development opportunities, influencing policy, promoting best practice among the children's workforce and commissioning work from our members.

The Trust was founded in 2007 by children's charities Afasic and I CAN together with BT and the Council for Disabled Children.

www.thecommunicationtrust.org.uk

Published June 2015

Design and photography: deborahripley.com