Although it’s a subject that’s extremely important to every resident, our production deadlines unfortunately prevented us from attending last Tuesday night’s Public Information Session put on by Algoma Power Inc. (API).

We did, however, ask several residents who did attend to share their reactions with our readers. The reactions ranged from a positive appreciation by some, although most respondents’ attitudes seemed more cynical, ranging to outright suspicion that API might be simply adding more window-dressing, while gearing up to pull a ‘fast one.’

Virtually all of the respondents described the evening as being tightly controlled and staged by API, featuring a 45 minute presentation followed not by a general Question & Answer period, but rather breaking up into small, separated groups that many felt did not allow for an integrated discussion. A team of API personnel were on hand, answering questions and listening to the concerns of those audience members who were able to speak with them. Nonetheless, most gave credit that perhaps Algoma Power Inc. has indeed been listening.

The purpose of the meeting was to unveil API’s plans for their upcoming power line replacement projects in St. Joseph Township, as well as their vegetation management work.

While we heard several concerns about the power lines themselves, the latter subject is the real ‘hot button.’ It’s of paramount concern to Island residents, since the sometimes-radical clear-cutting of trees and plants near power lines takes out ‘the good with the bad’, perhaps leaving the area at risk of takeover by more aggressive, invasive vegetation. The bigger threat however is the long term effect on the Island’s ecological health, which is put at risk by the spraying of toxic herbicides like Garlon.

Last fall’s Island Clippings articles (#1012 and 1013, October 8 and 15, 2015 respectively) on the dangers of Garlon spraying drew a storm of protest and concern from readers far and wide, many of whom had no idea that the chemical is potentially far more dangerous than they had been led to believe.

The spraying is a widespread practice, not limited to just the Island. Just Google ‘Hydro’ and ‘Garlon’ together and see for yourself.

While the Dow Chemical (AgroSciences) literature extols the virtues of their chemical, Health Canada’s information says otherwise, citing Garlon’s failure to pass its toxicology and biodegradability tests and its dangers to groundwater, plant life, as well as insects, birds and animals, particularly if used in areas with sandy soil. Nowadays, you can produce the science and data to prove just about anything, pro or con.

For several years now, the Township of St. Joseph has banned any herbicide spraying on any municipally-owned public lands including road allowances, shore road allowances, greenspaces, parks, trails or easements. Similarly, the Township of Jocelyn will not allow such chemical spraying on roadsides and road allowances, although landowners may still allow spraying of their property, should they wish to do so.

Perhaps things can and will eventually improve. In the words of one prominent Shore Road resident, “The hopeful thing is that they [API] were listening! And have been paying attention!”
In conjunction with the Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources and Forestry, Algoma Power has been experimenting with lower growing native plants and shrubs that will maintain the open path of the power line without causing the disruption of repeated cuttings and chemical sprayings. They would like to find the balance between high carbon footprint clearing (chain-saws and grubbers) and chemical spraying. Low-growing native plants and shrubbery would seem to be the answer.

Our Shore Road resident takes it a big step further: “Any chemical spraying leaves tiny creatures like beetles and worms vulnerable to poisoning, including pollinators. Then birds are vulnerable and eventually the herbicide ends up in the lake, river and groundwater. The real question is Why can’t we have power lines underground?”

There’s certainly more discussion, work and perhaps even controversy still ahead on these very touchy subjects, but we commend Algoma Power Inc. for recognizing the issues and reaching out to share their plans with the people who will be most affected by them.

Another whole week went by and I didn’t use algebra or calculus!

94,000 Strong: Ontarians Speak Out Loudly To Save Hospital Services

The Ontario Health Coalition’s May 31st public rally at Queen’s Park was the culmination of its recent referendum that saw 94,000 Ontarians participate to save Ontario’s community hospital services. Community representatives, concerned patients, and local health coalitions from all across the province gathered to deliver heaps of ballots to the Ontario Legislature.

Ontario PC Leader Patrick Brown and Ontario NDP Leader Andrea Horwath were on hand and promised to take the public’s demands to stop the cuts to community hospitals and restore services, funding, and staff to meet our communities’ needs, and make health care a key issue in the legislature.

Ontario Health Coalition Executive Director Natalie Mehra thanked the Opposition Leaders and promised the crowd that the OHC would continue to pressure all of the political parties to create a budget plan that would improve public hospital funding, and keep services in our local public community hospitals. The plan must also ensure that the money goes to care and vital support services, not to consultants and executives. The OHC is asking all political parties to improve hospital funding in Ontario to the average of the country.

More than 40 communities took part in the referendum and Reconstruction of 3 Bridges Commences

As announced in last week’s issue, the Township of St. Joseph has awarded a contract to Bernt Gilbertson Enterprises Ltd. for the rehabilitation of the Two Tree bridge on the A Line, the Two Tree bridge on the 10th Sideroad, and the Camp d’Ours bridge, along with some minor vertical realignment to Camp d’Ours Road at that bridge. Contract administration and inspection services will be provided by WSP Canada Inc.

Construction commenced this week on all three bridges, and the entire project is scheduled to be completed by September 15. Traffic delays might be expected, but will be kept to a minimum. Complete closure of the bridges, if required, will be kept to absolute minimum durations and the public will be well notified. In such cases, detour routes will be made available where feasible.

In the meantime, perhaps we should all plan our travel routes accordingly.

St. Joseph Island Museum Moment

Our annual What is it? is a fun little contest that lasts all season long here at the museum.

Here’s how it works. An artifact is chosen from the many artifacts we have, usually one that is intriguing and a perhaps a little challenging. It is then moved into the brick school for the duration of the summer.

This year I really combed the buildings looking for something obscure. After so many correct guesses last season I thought we needed something more challenging. So, here’s hoping I chose just that. Drop in for a visit and inspect this item more closely and fill out a ballot. As always the prize for the correct answer is a $40 gift card generously donated by Hess Jewellers.

The draw will take place at Harvestfest on Labour Day weekend. The winner with the correct answer will be announced in the Island Clippings and the annual member newsletter.

Happy Guessing!
