Prepares Employees for the “New” Retirement
We are pleased to announce TrainCom Ventures CEO, Brenda McClane, will speak at Indianapolis’ largest gathering of workforce professionals – 2016 Indiana Health & Wellness Summit, September 21st and 22nd, at the Indiana Convention Center, in Indianapolis. The session, titled: Prepare Employees for the “New” Retirement, will address why employees don’t take time to set personal goals for retirement, and why employers should care. Businesses have a lot to gain from encouraging employees to set goals for retirement, sooner than later. Examples include:
- Reduction or elimination of the employee’s financial stress
- Increased productivity and focus
- Reduced stress on healthcare benefits
- Higher levels of engagement and loyalty

To learn more about the Summit and the benefit of encouraging employees to plan for personal life transitions now, see TrainCom’s Blog. www.traincom-ventures.com/blog

Painted Piano Competition

Congratulations to Mark Gardner of Centerville, Indiana who won the $1,000 1st place prize in the Painted Piano competition. Carvin Rinehart of Richmond won 2nd place and Carly Dee and Casey Mattingly of Cambridge City won 3rd place. Mark also happens to be a carpenter/handyman and built all of the pianos the artists painted on.

Thanks to the judge Anita Giddings, Fine Arts Professor at IUPUI. (She was unaware of who the artists were to keep an even playing level for fairness).

A very special thank you to Bob and Margaret Wotherspoon. They inspired this project by dreaming up the Starr Piano Festival pia- no playing event currently going on to set the world record for continuous playing on a Starr Piano. We are lucky to have their devotion to Wayne County.

Other thanks: Mary Walker and the Wayne County Tourism Bureau, IU East, Chamber Center For Excellence. Also, Ed Thornburg, Tom Butters and Carolie Gardner for their part in painting on the original prototype along with the artists in this year’s competition.

Levi Coffin House

It’s not always that we find history that’s close enough to touch. In Fountain City, Ind., there is just such a place. Just over 150 years ago, the Levi Coffin House was considered the Grand Central Station of the Underground Railroad, and today, it’s one of our most important State Historic Sites.

For years, the Levi Coffin House State Historic Site has been quietly telling its story – and those stories of the more than 1,000 Freedom Seekers who passed through its door – to visitors from across the state and around the world. It has inspired so many who have crossed its threshold.

They say go big or go home, and we’re already home. This December, the Levi Coffin House State Historic Sites will go big with the opening of their new Interpretive Center. This Center will allow the Coffin House to be open to visitors year-round for the first time ever. It will be fully accessible, so that all visitors, no matter their ability, can witness the wonders of the Coffins’ home. The stories of Levi and Catharine Coffin – and those whom they helped flee from slavery – will be more completely told than they ever have been before. Thousands more visitors every year, many of them Hoosier school children will be able to learn about this remarkable piece of Indiana’s history.

The bravery these escaped slaves showed as they sought their freedom is a shining jewel in the crown of our Hoosier heritage, and with the opening of the Interpretive Center, the Levi Coffin House will tell these stories the way they have always deserved to be told.

I was fortunate to be asked to serve as the Capital Campaign Chair for the project. Thanks to the support of the many residents of Wayne County and East Central Indiana along with the out- standing professionalism demonstrated by staff of the Indiana State Museum and the University of Indianapolis, Hoosiers will be able to better understand the risks and sacrifices of freedom seekers and their supporters.

I encourage you to learn more about the Center, its opening and the Coffins by visiting online at indianascenes.org/levicoffin. Thank you for joining us as we celebrate the rich history and diversity of Indiana.

Robin E. Winston
Member, Indiana State Museum and Historic Sites Board of Directors
