Welcome to January's edition of Regulation round-up. Many people will have read about the recently published HBOS Report which was concerned with the reasons for the failure of HBOS and, in a separate section written by Andrew Green QC, the responses of the Financial Services Authority (FSA) to the failure, including the enforcement investigations that were carried out.

He concluded that the FSA had made a number of mistakes, including that its investigations were not as wide-ranging as they should have been, which meant there was no investigation into the conduct of some of the most senior people in HBOS.

These findings throw light on our investigation practice. Many think that if we commence an investigation, then it is as if enforcement proceedings have started and a large sanction will be inevitable. This is not, nor should it be, true.

An investigation is an open-minded inquiry into whether or not something has gone wrong or misconduct has occurred. The purpose of an investigation is not to prosecute a point of view or opinion. It should be a common outcome for investigations to end with decisions to take no further action.
The HBOS Report is a good reminder of these important principles.

Packaged Retail and Insurance-based Investment Products (PRIIPs)

The Packaged Retail and Insurance-based Investment Products (PRIIPs) Regulation is a major piece of European legislation that applies directly to a range of different business models. The aim of the Regulation is to encourage efficiency in the EU by helping investors to better understand and compare the key features, risks, rewards and costs of different PRIIPs.

It's important that all firms who manufacture, sell or advise on PRIIPs understand what the changes mean for them before the implementation date of 31 December 2016.

Manufacturers must prepare a Key Information Document (KID) and publish it on their website. A KID is a stand-alone, standardised document prepared for each investment.

Each KID will need to contain specific information under the following headings:

- what is this product?
- what are the risks and what could I get in return?
- what happens if [name of the PRIIP manufacturer] is unable to pay out?
- what are the costs?
- how long should I hold it and can I take money out early?
- how can I complain?
- other relevant information

Firms who sell or advise on a PRIIP must provide their client with a KID in good time before any transaction is concluded. If the client starts the transaction by distance communications (e.g. by phone), firms can provide the KID after the transaction has taken place, but only if it is not possible to provide the KID in advance and the client consents.

We will be consulting later this year on amendments to disclosure requirements in the Handbook to include the introduction of the PRIIP Regulation.
Hot topic:
Online Dispute Resolution (ODR) platform

From 15 February 2016, the European Commission will make an online dispute resolution (ODR) platform available on their website, which will allow consumers who have a complaint about a product or service bought online to submit the complaint using the platform. It will facilitate resolution of complaints rather than actually resolving them.

Complaints submitted to the platform will be dealt with by approved alternative dispute resolution (ADR) providers such as the Financial Ombudsman Service (the ombudsman service). The European ODR Regulation requires firms to provide certain information to consumers about the ODR platform.

The Department for Business, Innovation and Skills (BIS) has produced detailed guidance for businesses on the ODR requirements (see the ODR Annex).

Credit unions’ services and products
A number of credit unions and interested parties have recently asked us about the potential of expanding the services or products credit unions offer. We need to remind both the sector and interested parties that credit union's activities are restricted to those permitted by the Credit Unions Act 1979 (“the Act”).

Under the Act, credit unions can, for example, accept deposits and make loans. However, credit unions may not carry on activities unless the Act gives them the power to do so. Section 9A of the Act allows credit unions to provide any service related to the activity of accepting a deposit or making a loan (because it provides a power to charge for providing such services). Credit unions must also exercise their powers in a way that achieves the objects set out in s1(3) of the Act.

The objects of a credit union are:

- the promotion of thrift among the society's members by accumulating their savings
- the creation of sources of credit for the benefit of the society's members at a fair and reasonable rate of interest
- the use and control of the members' savings for their mutual benefit
- the training and education of the members in the wise use of money and in the management of their financial affairs

This therefore limits the services that credit unions can provide.
January news round-up

Statement regarding Tracey McDermott
We have confirmed that Acting Chief Executive Tracey McDermott decided in early December to withdraw from the process to appoint the permanent Chief Executive of the FCA.
