Forensics Competition
by Gail Scott

The Hampton High School Forensics (speech and debate) team has had a busy year! The team participates in a number of local tournaments but most recently they traveled to Susquehanna University in Selinsgrove, PA to take part in the Pennsylvania High School Speech League Tournament (PHSSL) on April 8th and 9th.

One team of 12th grade students qualified for states in Parliamentary Debate. The students were Jack Evans, Luke Lacher, and Phil Margaria. In this type of debate, the students form a legislative body and argue as the Government (for the resolution) or the Opposition about 86 students put on a highly entertaining show that kept the audience laughing.

Senior Grant Muir, who portrayed King Arthur, said, “Spamalot was a display of our talent, but it’s what created that display that made it special. Everyone poured their time, passion and enthusiasm into this show.” Muir said they rehearsed five to six days a week, and it was exhausting; but they relished every second of it. The directors did a terrific job of setting the standard.

Forensic Competition

During the school year, the team competes in other tournaments in addition to the PHSSL qualifiers. The team has competed in other tournaments this year including local competitions at North Allegheny, Upper St. Clair, West Allegheny, Knoch, Cardinal Wuerl North Catholic, Keystone Oaks, Pittsburgh Central Catholic, and Pine-Richland. Hampton also hosted their first annual debate tournament at the high school on December 5th. The Hampton team took 1st place at North Allegheny and 2nd place at the PHSSL qualifier. Jack and Luke also placed first at Pine-Richland and in the top six at the National Speech and Debate Association congress qualifiers.

In addition to their competitive success, the team has seen tremendous membership growth over the past year, going from five to over twenty-five members. According to Alison McBee, “Speech and debate is a tough activity and to be successful requires pretty intense commitment. Our district (Pittsburgh, District 2) is one of the most competitive in the state. It’s extremely challenging and a great exercise in tolerance, professional decorum, and creativity.”

On an interesting note, Ms. McBee taught English at Knoch High School before coming to teach English at HHS. This year she coached both Hampton and Knoch in Forensics and debate. I asked her if it was difficult to coach two teams that might compete against each other at the same tournament. “Working with two teams surprisingly doesn’t incite much conflict.” She told me, “We do compete in a lot of the same events—Poetry/Prose, Congress, and Public Forum—but for the most part there isn’t a whole lot of overlap. I think it’s been advantageous for the teams to have such a close relationship. Forensics is interesting in that as much as we operate like a team, it really comes down to individual performances. I guess what I’m saying is that overall, forensics is more about community and less about who won and who didn’t, which is why the teams work well together.”

Why Aren’t You Well? Because...

You’re listening. You’re listening to mistruths, outdated theories, or the advice of those who may be well-intentioned but are simply misled. Here, at Revelation Health, as we educate and supply health practitioners around the planet, we’ve helped hundreds of our local neighborhood friends rediscover health. In virtually every case, the health compromise was being nurtured by misinformation. We empower people by shedding light, sharing truth, and providing nutritional aids and supplements when they’re vitally important.

What’s really amazing is, years before modern day medicine became systemized, people had it right. Of course, back then, the foods weren’t toxicified, modified, or stripped of nutrient value. In fact, many primitive civilizations living in isolated parts of the world today are free of cancer, diabetes, heart disease, osteoporosis, and the other common maladies we wrongly associate with aging. All that space allows for are a few random truths, but they may give you a sense that a bit of nutritional guidance is in order right now if you or the people you love are falling short of excellence in the realm of health.

I know it’s hard to believe with everything you’ve heard, but the yolk of an egg may provide the greatest nutrient benefit... but (and this is a big but) the egg has to come from a naturally raised chicken that eats from the natural earth. Comparing a commercially sold grocery story egg with a truly natural egg is like comparing cardboard to caviar. This comes as a shock to those who habitually eat egg white omelets, but it’s one of those truths that need to be told. You’re throwing out the good stuff. Why is this the case? Come in. We’ll explain.

Here’s another. Most health conscious people don’t eat enough fat. “Whaaaaaattt???!!!” That is not a typographical error. Fat is not bad. Fat is good. Provided, of course, it’s the good type of fat that serves us. What amazes most of our visitors is that eating grass-fed red meat, consuming organ meats, and even eating the darker meat chicken right off the bone can lead to healthier hearts, healthier bones, healthier connective tissues, and healthier cells. For those who are committed to vegan or vegetarian lifestyles, we’re in your corner, and we can coach you how to maintain gut health, ideal body composition, and optimal energy by strategically obtaining the elements most vegans miss out on.

How about yogurt? That’s good, right? It has that lactoba... whatever that Jamie Lee Curtis talks about on the commercial. Want some truth? Most commercially sold yogurt is simply food for the bad bacteria living in your gut, despite what the commercials say, yet the fermentation process that creates yogurt can be one of the most life-giving processes we can benefit from... if we know what to look for.

If this runs counter to everything you’ve heard, if you’ve been told “eat lots of fruits and vegetables and you’ll be healthy,” just stop and do a quick self-exam. Is your energy the same as it was when you were 20? It should be. Are your muscles and bones feeling strong, and fit, and ready to take on the world? They should. Is your thinking clear, your memory intact, and your sleep regular? If the answer is anything other than a resounding yes to any of those questions, stop in for a visit. It won’t cost you a thing to come in, say “hello,” and share a bit of what you’d like to improve. Our knowledge is free, our staff is caring, and our ability to change lives is impacting folks all over the world. We’re not only in your corner, we’re in your neighborhood. Stop in.

At Revelation Health, Allison Park’s Best Kept Secret, we battle misinformation. We help people cut through the confusion and optimize their nutrition. More energy, reversal of symptoms, and an enhanced sense of well-being are the words we hear from our customers and clients. We remain a best kept secret as we serve health practitioners around the nation, but since you’re a neighbor, and the secret is out, stop in! Ask us what coconut oil, or any of nature’s gifts, can do to improve your health, your family’s health, and... your ability to navigate life with less stress, more power, and the vital energy you deserve.

MiniTHON for Childhood Cancer Exceeds Goal
by Gail Scott

Students at Hampton High School held the 2nd Annual MiniTHON on April 1st and their event was incredibly successful this year. The student council set a goal of $15,000, but when they revealed their grand total at the end of the night they had raised $30,859! The event was sponsored by the high school’s Student Council and benefits the Four Diamonds movement to help conquer childhood cancer. The miniTHON event is modeled after THON which is held every year at Penn State University, also benefitting the Four Diamonds Foundation. The Hampton event has teams of students and faculty competing in various fun events at HHS on the night of THON.

By Gail Scott

The Hampton 8th Grade Boys Basketball team played a fast and furious game against the HMS faculty on Friday, April 22nd (is this the right date?), all for a good cause. The game was a fundraiser for a foundation called It’s About the Warrior.

The HMS Student Council and the PTO sponsored the fundraiser. A free throw competition was held before the game began. Students donated $1 to enter the contest and they were eligible to win gift cards that the student council purchased. The students that made their first free throw then moved back to the 3-point line and had a shoot out.

The basketball game started off at a fast pace and the score was very close right up until the final buzzer. The 8th grade boys pulled ahead in the end and won the game with a final score of 68-61. It was truly a fun game to watch and it looked like the kids and adults had a great time playing against each other.

Steve Mantellone is the founder and CEO of the It’s About the Warrior Foundation. He was on hand before the game to tell the audience a little about the great work the foundation does for local veterans and then he thanked HMS for donating money to the foundation. Brandon Rumbaugh from the foundation was also in attendance to visit with the students and talk about his experiences. The basketball event raised $1,346.00 to donate to the fund. HMS Student Council Advisor Glenn Geary had this to say about the students of HMS, “I am truly amazed at the thoughtfulness and caring that the community of Hampton Township shows to our local veterans. It’s About the Warrior is an organization that keeps the money in the Southwestern PA area, and $1,346.00 will go a long way to help local veterans get much needed resources.”

Non Contact Boxing can be Beneficial to Parkinson’s Patients

by Nicole Kline

Vibrant music and an enthusiastic staff greet individuals as they arrive at Fit 4 Boxing Club. The energy is high but the stakes are even higher. While Fit 4 Boxing Club offers multiple exhilarating classes, owner Rich Mushinsky feels most passionate about the Rock Steady boxing classes.

Rock Steady Boxing is a non-contact, fundamental boxing course where Parkinson’s patients fight back against their symptoms. The coaches and boxers train together alongside their spouses, caregivers, and volunteers (these individuals are referred to as cornermen).

Mingling before the class, an icebreaker at the beginning, and the partner support throughout all bolster the social aspect of the sessions. Rich explains that this helps everyone see that they are “fighting the same disease” and they are not fighting it alone.

In addition to socializing and support, the boxers practice boxing stances, footwork, and combinations. The workout is high intensity and tailored to each individual. The coaches encourage them and “force their body to go above and beyond.”

Rich knows that the toughest thing to do is get out the door and start the program. But it is clear, by the passion in each boxer’s eyes, that once you see the results and the energy of the group you will keep coming back. This goes for volunteers as well. Fit 4 Boxing Club is always looking for more cornermen. Paul Hoffman, a repeat boxer who lives in the South Hills, said he “saw [Rock Steady] on 60 Minutes, saw it on the news, and had to see it [himself].”

If you know of anyone living with Parkinson’s Disease or if you are interested in becoming a volunteer for the Rock Steady Boxing Program, please contact us at (412) 213-3584 or via email at rich@fit4boxingclub.com.
What Success Really Looks Like

Imagine a family of six – mom, dad, and four children – living in a 3-bedroom house with one full bath. Now add Aunt Grace and Grandma. Now we’re at eight. Imagine mom going to college at night while working a full-time job and raising her family (which now also includes Aunt Grace and Grandma). Imagine dad working three jobs to keep the ship afloat. So when one of the daughters cried at the teacher’s desk over “calculating percent of a number” in 8th grade, getting a private math tutor wasn’t an option. It was her big brother to the rescue. Anyone who has ever tried to help his/her brother or sister or his/her son or daughter knows how trying this can be. Year after year, the girl’s skills gap widened further but somehow she got through math, but not with A’s or B’s. She managed to get the grade(s) she needed to check the math credit box each year up through high school graduation. Oddly enough though, she earned a Bachelor’s degree in MATHEMATICS from the University of Pittsburgh’s main campus. She served as a mathematics classroom teacher, then Mathematics Department Head, and was quickly groomed for school administration. She served as Director of Curriculum and Instruction for an education management company that makes online learning academies for school districts. She served as a Mathematics and School Leadership Consultant for an affiliate of the National Center on Education and the Economy (NCEE) – America’s Choice. In that role, eight schools that received her on-site technical assistance in the areas of school leadership and mathematics:

- Showed increases in student achievement at the Advanced level in mathematics that were \(3.5\) times greater than the school district as a whole;
- Showed growth in Proficiency in mathematics equal to 2-3 times greater than the remainder of the district;
- Students posted percentage point reduction in Below Basic double the district reduction in Below Basic in math.

while nurturing individuality. The cast was tenacious without being competitive. “They brought out the best of me, and that is why I’m so grateful.”

Senior Alexa Aurendnik who played multiple roles including “Knight of Ni” said, “This show was amazing. I couldn’t imagine performing in the past eight shows without this company. We are all a family.”

Junior Brendan Gillespie said it was the most fun he’s had with a production. “I was given the opportunity to portray several very contrasting roles. From being an absurdly aristocratic French Taunter to a Watchtower Guard (who humorously goes from an above average intelligence to a severely low one) and everything in between. Those many months working on “Spamalot” have been not only the most dedicated moments of my life but also the most memorable, and that is something I will carry with me for the rest of my life. If any future ninth to twelfth graders have any interest in participating in the musicals, please do it. Let this be a testament to the great things you will experience and become a part of.”

Fantastic Hampton Talent

Hannagan Hired as Poff Elementary Principal

The Hampton Township School District Board of School Directors voted unanimously to appoint Ms. Colleen Hannagan as the new principal of Poff Elementary School at the April 25th special Board meeting. She will replace Dr. Michael Mooney, who plans to retire from the District on June 30th.

Ms. Hannagan was one of 131 applicants reviewed for the position, and one of four candidates chosen to return for a second interview following the initial interview process. Candidates were required to present findings from a data analysis activity and then answer a series of questions specific to the role of a principal or leader as part of the final interview process.

Ms. Hannagan and her husband Josh Lucas reside in Duquesne Heights with their Boston Terrier, Rufus. She presently serves as the assistant principal of McKnight Elementary School in the North Allegheny School District. Ms. Hannagan holds School Counselor K-12 and School Principal K-12 certifications. She is currently pursuing a doctorate degree in Educational Leadership through the University of Pittsburgh while managing to find time for health and fitness activities. Her anticipated start date is July 1st.
