The skill of speech writing

Writing an effective speech is a skill. Writers use what are called rhetorical devices to make their speeches sound good, to make people listen to them and to make people believe that what they are saying is right.

1. Some of the rhetorical devices writers use are listed below. You may recognise some of them from your study of poetry. Find out what they all mean and write a definition. Some blank spaces have been left for you to fill in any other rhetorical devices you know or come across:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Rhetorical Device</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Alliteration</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Anecdote</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Assonance</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Contrasting pairs</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Parallel pairs</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Personal pronouns</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Repetition</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rhetorical questions</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Statistics</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Well known references (e.g. biblical)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

2. Now, colour in each of the spaces to the left of the rhetorical devices with a different colour to create a key or legend for your rhetorical devices.

3. Read through the extracts from famous speeches on the next two pages.

4. Shade each rhetorical device you find with the correct colour, according to your key.

5. The speeches are all famous and remembered because they were so effective: persuasive; moving; inspirational or a combination of all these. Explain why you think the speeches are effective.

6. Remembering to include these devices, write a speech either about someone that you admire or to persuade students that they should do at least an hour’s homework each night.
Extracts from famous speeches

- But we refuse to believe that the bank of justice is bankrupt. We refuse to believe that there are insufficient funds in the great vaults of opportunity of this nation. And so, we've come to cash this check, a check that will give us upon demand the riches of freedom and the security of justice.

  We have also come to this hallowed spot to remind America of the fierce urgency of Now. This is no time to engage in the luxury of cooling off or to take the tranquilizing drug of gradualism. Now is the time to make real the promises of democracy. Now is the time to rise from the dark and desolate valley of segregation to the sunlit path of racial justice. Now is the time to lift our nation from the quicksands of racial injustice to the solid rock of brotherhood. Now is the time to make justice a reality for all of God's children.

  From: Martin Luther King's 'I have a dream' speech, 1963

- And I want to say something to the schoolchildren of America who were watching the live coverage of the shuttle's take-off. I know it's hard to understand, but sometimes painful things like this happen. It's all part of the process of exploration and discovery. It's all part of taking a chance and expanding man's horizons. The future doesn't belong to the fainthearted; it belongs to the brave. The Challenger crew was pulling us into the future, and we'll continue to follow them.

  I've always had great faith in and respect for our space program. And what happened today does nothing to diminish it. We don't hide our space program. We don't keep secrets and cover things up. We do it all up front and in public. That's the way freedom is, and we wouldn't change it for a minute.

  We'll continue our quest in space. There will be more shuttle flights and more shuttle crews and, yes, more volunteers, more civilians, more teachers in space. Nothing ends here; our hopes and our journeys continue.

  From: Ronald Reagan's speech on the Space Shuttle 'Challenger' disaster, 1986

- LONDON I stand before you today, the representative of a family in grief, in a country in mourning, before a world in shock.

  We are all united, not only in our desire to pay our respects to Diana but rather in our need to do so. For such was her extraordinary appeal that the tens of millions of people taking part in this service all over the world, via television and radio, who never actually met her, feel that they, too, lost someone close to them in the early hours of Sunday morning. It is a more remarkable tribute to Diana than I can ever hope to offer her today.

  Diana was the very essence of compassion, of duty, of style, of beauty. All over the world, she was a symbol of selfless humanity. All over the world, a standard bearer for the rights of the truly downtrodden, a very British girl who transcended nationality. Someone with a natural nobility who was classless and who proved in the last year that she needed no royal title to continue to generate her particular brand of magic.

  Today is our chance to say thank you for the way you brightened our lives, even though God granted you but half a life. We will all feel cheated, always, that you were taken from us so young, and yet we must learn to be grateful that you came along at all. Only now that you are gone do we truly appreciate what we are now without and we want you to know that life without you is very, very difficult.

  From: Earl Spencer's Eulogy at Princess Diana’s funeral, 1997
We go to liberate not to conquer. We will not fly our flags in their country. We are entering Iraq to free a people and the only flag which will be flown in that ancient land is their own. Show respect for them.

There are some who are alive at this moment who will not be alive shortly. Those who do not wish to go on that journey, we will not send.

As for the others I expect you to rock their world. Wipe them out if that is what they choose. But if you are ferocious in battle remember to be magnanimous in victory.

Iraq is steeped in history. It is the site of the Garden of Eden, of the Great Flood and the birthplace of Abraham. Tread lightly there.

You will see things that no man could pay to see and you will have to go a long way to find a more decent, generous and upright people than the Iraqis.

You will be embarrassed by their hospitality even though they have nothing.

Don't treat them as refugees for they are in their own country. Their children will be poor, in years to come they will know that the light of liberation in their lives was brought by you.

From: Lieutenant Colonel Tim Collins’ speech before the invasion of Iraq, 2003

---

We observe today not a victory of party, but a celebration of freedom -- symbolizing an end, as well as a beginning -- signifying renewal, as well as change. For I have sworn before you and Almighty God the same solemn oath our forebears prescribed nearly a century and three-quarters ago.

The world is very different now. For man holds in his mortal hands the power to abolish all forms of human poverty and all forms of human life. And yet the same revolutionary beliefs for which our forebears fought are still at issue around the globe -- the belief that the rights of man come not from the generosity of the state, but from the hand of God.

We dare not forget today that we are the heirs of that first revolution. Let the word go forth from this time and place, to friend and foe alike, that the torch has been passed to a new generation of Americans -- born in this century, tempered by war, disciplined by a hard and bitter peace, proud of our ancient heritage, and unwilling to witness or permit the slow undoing of those human rights to which this nation has always been committed, and to which we are committed today at home and around the world.

Let every nation know, whether it wishes us well or ill, that we shall pay any price, bear any burden, meet any hardship, support any friend, oppose any foe, to assure the survival and the success of liberty.

This much we pledge -- and more.

From: John F Kennedy’s Inaugural address, 1961