• Councilor Payne stated Lockheed Martin announced, internally, that they had chosen Greenville, South Carolina, as the site they wanted to do the final assembly and checkout of the new T50A trainer jet plane. He felt this was a great opportunity for Greenville. He stated the fact that SCTAC was growing, as well as other parts of Greenville County, the Council needed to be aware of the potential they had for an increased demand for industrial and office commercial properties. He felt they needed to get GADC and other economic development entities to work with the County to help develop ways to preserve the sites that were most appropriate for industrial and commercial use; and to find ways to market those sites to companies who wanted to come to Greenville.

• Councilor Dill stated the County had highly qualified people in EMS and he very much appreciated the County’s EMS Department. He then stated he and Mr. Kirven had been working with the Clerk on the litter problem in the County. He stated currently there was a law that allowed judges to sentence a person to jail or to community service. If the weather wasn’t agreeable, the perpetrators could just choose jail time.
A bill was being proposed that would take away the “choice” and allow judges to pass down a sentence of “community service,” which would help clean up the state’s roads. He asked the Chairman to assign a committee to take up the matter of adopting an amendment to be included in the proposed law. Once the Committee had approved the amendment he asked that Council vote to send the amendment to Columbia for inclusion in the law.
