Before setting out or when you return from Port Dover, Kitchener/Waterloo or Hamilton, take two days to explore Brantford's impressive network of almost 70 km of recreational trails, including 26 km of Trans Canada Trail. Many of these trails follow both sides of the Grand River, a National Heritage Site. In addition, many of Brantford's historic sites are located on the city trails or easily accessed from them. These include: Mohawk Chapel, the Bell Homestead, both National Historic Sites, Woodland Cultural Centre, the Canadian Military Heritage Museum, Glenhyrst Art Gallery, Brantford Armory and the War Memorial. The city trails also are adjacent to various sports fields and facilities, beautiful floral parks, shopping plazas and stately old homes. They also bisect two publicly owned 200 acre natural parks adjacent to the Grand River.

In addition the Trans Canada Trail arms joining Brantford to Hamilton and Port Dover are also part of what is known as "Brock's Route." This present trail is the most part aligned with the route that Major General Isaac Brock took between Hamilton and Port Dover through Brantford in the War of 1812 – 1814.
