The aim of financial management in the public sector is to manage limited resources to ensure economy and efficiency in the delivery of outputs required to achieve desirable outcomes that will serve the needs of the community. A sound public financial management system (PFM) allows governments to make best use of its resources to improve quality of life in the society.

Strong and effective Public Financial Management is a vital component for a good governance. A PFM strategy underpins fiscal and macro stability, guide the allocation of public resources to national priorities, support the efficient delivery of services for poverty reduction and economic development, and make possible the transparency and scrutiny of public funds.

Transtec supports public sector stakeholders in improving the linkage of policy priorities to budget planning, ensuring delivery of a credible budget delivering predictable resources, improved internal control and integration of accountability and review processes for both financial and performance management to hold public service actors to account. We assist countries to strengthen public financial management by providing specific expertise in all components of revenue (tax system, revenue mobilization...) and public expenditure (budget procedure, financial management and accounting, audit, PEFA...) for both central and sector Ministries.

Transtec is also implicated in the local governance. Decentralisation is currently being pursued in over 80% of developing countries worldwide. The case for decentralisation is argued on both political grounds – as strengthening democracy, accountability and participation by bringing government ‘closer’ to its citizens – and economic grounds, enhancing the efficiency and effectiveness of public service provision.

Some examples on Transtec practice in PFM are presented below:
