Introduction
A Guide to Resources in the Law Library

- “We have consistently held in matters involving child custody that while the rights, wishes and desires of the parents must be considered it is nevertheless the ultimate welfare of the child which must control the decision of the court.” In re Appeal of Kindis, 162 Conn. 239, 242, 294 A.2d 316 (1972).

- “It is statutorily incumbent upon a court entering orders concerning custody or visitation or a modification of such order to be guided by the best interests of the child.” Wilson v. Wilson, 38 Conn. App. 263, 269, 661 A.2d 621 (1995).

- Joint Custody: “There shall be a presumption, affecting the burden of proof, that joint custody is in the best interests of a minor child where the parents have agreed to an award of joint custody or so agree in open court at a hearing for the purpose of determining the custody of the minor child or children of the marriage. If the court declines to enter an order awarding joint custody pursuant to this subsection, the court shall state in its decision the reasons for denial of an award of joint custody.” Conn. Gen. Stats. § 46b-56a(b) (2013).

- Nonparent: “In any dispute as to the custody of a minor child involving a parent and a nonparent, there shall be a presumption that it is in the best interest of the child to be in the custody of the parent, which presumption may be rebutted by showing that it would be detrimental to the child to permit the parent to have custody.” Conn. Gen. Stats. § 46b-56b (2013).

- Third Party Visitation: We conclude that the trial court improperly determined that the best interest of the child standard can overcome the Roth standard for ordering visitation. DiGiovanna v. St. George, 300 Conn. 59, 68, 12 A.3d 900 (2011).

Section 1: Statutory Factors
(Effective October 1, 2005)

A Guide to Resources in the Law Library

SCOPE: Bibliographic sources relating to the statutory factors the courts may consider in determining the best interest of the child effective October 1, 2005.

DEFINITIONS:
- Factors: In making or modifying any order as provided in subsections (a) and (b) of this section, the court shall consider the best interests of the child, and in doing so may consider, but shall not be limited to, one or more of the following factors . . . “
  Conn. Gen. Stats. § 46b-56(c) (2013)
- See Table 1 for enumeration of statutory factors

LEGISLATIVE HISTORY:
- Preliminary Legislative History of P.A. 05-258

CASES:
- Watrous v. Watrous, 108 Conn. App. 813, 825 (2008). “The language of § 46b-56 (c), however, does not compel the consideration of any particular factor or factors when determining the best interest of a child. See General Statutes § 46b-56 (c) ("[i]n making or modifying any order as provided in subsections (a) and (b) of this section, the court shall consider the best interests of the child, and in doing so may consider, but shall not be limited to, one or more of the following factors . . . .")
  Rather, the court is free to consider the factors it determines to be most appropriate given the facts of each individual case.
- Fennelly v. Norton, 103 Conn. App. 125, 143-144 (2007). “As this court recently noted in Fish v. Fish, 90 Conn. App. 744, 881 A.2d 342, cert. granted, 275 Conn. 924, 883 A.2d 1243 (2005), the petition for child custody and the application for child visitation are two different animals. Whereas the paramount concern of the court in Roth was the right of a fit parent to raise a child free of interference by the state and nonparents, the paramount concern in awarding custody is the best interest of the child. Id., 756-57. The plaintiffs posit that by amending § 46b-56 to require the court to consider the best interest of the child in making or modifying any order as to the custody or care of a child, the legislature effectively overruled Roth’s statement that in reviewing an application for visitation, ‘the best interests of the child are secondary to the parents’ rights.’ Roth v. Weston, supra, 259 Conn. 223. Nothing in either the plain language of P.A. 05-258 or its legislative history supports that assertion. As such, the plaintiffs’ claim fails.”
- Diez-Canseco v. Hunt, No. FA04-4001769 (Conn. Super. Ct., J.D. New London (Apr. 19, 2006) 2006 WL 1230063. “The court has also weighed all of the relevant factors now enumerated in General Statutes § 46b-56(c), particularly the developmental needs of Carlos, the capacity and the disposition of the parent to understand and meet his needs, the willingness and ability of each parent to facilitate and encourage continuing parent-child relationship between the child and the other parent, including compliance with court orders, any manipulation by or coercive behavior of the parents in an effort to include the child in the parents' dispute, the stability of the child's existing and proposed residences, and the ability of each parent to be actively involved in the life of the child. Clearly the present custodial arrangement of two weeks in Connecticut with the plaintiff and two weeks in Maine with the defendant is not in Carlos' best interests. Unfortunately due to the defendant's lack of transportation and funds, the plaintiff has had to bear all the burdens of transportation.”

- Fish v. Fish, 90 Conn. App. 744, 757, 881 A.2d 343 (2005). “There is no question that the defendant, as a father, enjoys due process protection in disputes over the custody of the child. Our legislature has recognized as much in enacting § 46b-56b, which creates a rebuttable presumption that, in custody disputes between a parent and a nonparent, it is in the best interest of the child to be in the custody of the parent . . . . Given the court's findings of fact as reported previously, however, there was ample evidence for the court to conclude that the presumption in the defendant's favor was rebutted.”

In making or modifying any order as provided in subsections (a) and (b) of this section, the court shall consider the best interests of the child, and in doing so may consider, but shall not be limited to, one or more of the following factors:

1. The temperament and developmental needs of the child;
2. The capacity and the disposition of the parents to understand and meet the needs of the child;
3. Any relevant and material information obtained from the child, including the informed preferences of the child;
4. The wishes of the child's parents as to custody;
5. The past and current interaction and relationship of the child with each parent, the child's siblings and any other person who may significantly affect the best interests of the child;
6. The willingness and ability of each parent to facilitate and encourage such continuing parent-child relationship between the child and the other parent as is appropriate, including compliance with any court orders;
7. Any manipulation by or coercive behavior of the parents in an effort to involve the child in the parents' dispute;
8. The ability of each parent to be actively involved in the life of the child;
9. The child's adjustment to his or her home, school and community environments;
10. The length of time that the child has lived in a stable and satisfactory environment and the desirability of maintaining continuity in such environment, provided the court may consider favorably a parent who voluntarily leaves the child's family home pendente lite in order to alleviate stress in the household;
11. The stability of the child's existing or proposed residences, or both;
12. The mental and physical health of all individuals involved, except that a disability of a proposed custodial parent or other party, in and of itself, shall not be determinative of custody unless the proposed custodial arrangement is not in the best interests of the child;
13. The child's cultural background;
14. The effect on the child of the actions of an abuser, if any domestic violence has occurred between the parents or between a parent and another individual or the child;
15. Whether the child or a sibling of the child has been abused or neglected, as defined respectively in section 46b-120; and

SEE ALSO:
- Section 1: Statutory factors court may consider after October 1, 2005

DEFINITIONS:
- “We continue to adhere to the view that the legislature was acting wisely in leaving the delicate and difficult process of fact-finding in family matters to flexible, individualized adjudication of the particular facts of each case without the constraint of objective guidelines.” Seymour v. Seymour, 180 Conn. 705, 710, 433 A.2d 1005 (1980).

STATUTES:
  - § 46b-56. [Prior to October 1, 2005] Superior Court orders re custody or visitation, the court shall:
  - (b). In making or modifying any order with respect to custody or visitation, the court shall:
    - (1) be guided by the best interest of the child, giving consideration to the wishes of the child if the child is of sufficient age and capable of forming an intelligent preference, provided in making the initial order the court may take into consideration the causes for dissolution of the marriage or legal separation if such causes are relevant in a determination of the best interest of the child and
    - (2) consider whether the party satisfactorily completed participation in a parenting education established pursuant to section 46b-69b.
  - (f) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (b) of this section, when a motion for modification of custody or visitation is pending before the court or has been decided by the court and the investigation ordered by the court pursuant to section 46b-6 recommends psychiatric or psychological therapy for a child, and such therapy would, in the court's opinion, be in the best interests of the child and aid the child's response to a modification, the court may order such therapy and reserve judgment on the motion for modification.
  - § 45a-719. Reopening judgment terminating parental rights.
    “... For the purpose of this section, "best interest of the child" shall include, but not be limited to, a consideration of the age of the child, the nature of the relationship of the child with the caretaker of the child, the length of time the child has been in the custody of the caretaker, the nature of the relationship of the child with the birth parent, the length of time the child has been in the custody of the birth parent, any relationship that may exist between the child and siblings or other children in the caretaker's household, and the psychological and medical needs of the child. The determination of the best interest of the child shall not be based on a consideration of the socio-economic status of the birth parent or the caretaker."

CASES:

- Foster v. Foster, 84 Conn. App. 311, 323, 853 A.2d 588 (2004). “It is well established that the court may require the parties and the child to undergo a psychiatric or psychological evaluation for the purpose of properly disposing of a family matter, in a modification of custody case, to assist in determining the best interest of the child. See General Statutes §§ 46b-3 and 46b-6; Pascal v. Pascal, 2 Conn. App. 472, 478-79, 481 A.2d 68 (1984). Until recently, the trial court was without statutory authority to order parties to undergo counseling after entering orders regarding the custody of the minor child. See Janik v. Janik, 61 Conn. App. 175, 180, 763 A.2d 65 (2000) (concluding that "nothing in §§ 46b-3 and 46b-6 authorizes the court to order parties in a custody battle to undergo psychiatric therapy or counseling postjudgment since those provisions apply to pending family matters"), cert. denied, 255 Conn. 940, 768 A.2d 949 (2001). Our legislature, however, amended General Statutes § 46b-56 (g) in 2002, as follows: ‘As part of a decision concerning custody or visitation, the court may order either parent or both of the parents and any child of such parents to participate in counseling and drug or alcohol screening, provided such participation is in the best interest of the child.’ On the basis of that unambiguous statutory language, the court had the authority to order the plaintiff to undergo postjudgment counseling.”
- Bretherton v. Bretherton, 72 Conn. App. 528, 538, 805 A.2d 766 (2002). "At the very outset of its analysis in Ireland, our Supreme Court announced that it had created the burden shifting scheme to further ‘our commitment to the best interests of the child standard. . . .’ Id., [Ireland v. Ireland, 246 Conn. 413,] 421. Moreover, after articulating the shifting burdens of proof, our Supreme Court again took the ‘opportunity to reaffirm that the best interests of the child must always govern decisions involving custodial or visitation matters.’ Id., [246 Conn. 425,] 430.”
- Crockett v. Pastore, 259 Conn. 240, 250, 789 A.2d 453 (2002). “In Roth [v. Weston, 259 Conn. 202, 223, 789 A.2d 431 (2002)], however, we determined that the best interest of the child was not a sufficiently compelling interest to warrant the state's intrusion into a fit parent's decision regarding visitation.”
- Ford v. Ford, 68 Conn. App. 173, 173-74, 789 A.2d 1104 (2002). “The defendant's claim to the contrary notwithstanding, the trial court properly decided whether the plaintiff should be allowed to relocate with the child pursuant to the statutory (§ 46b-56) best interest of the child standard; because the interests and circumstances of the parties at the postjudgment stage differ from those existing at the time of dissolution, the Ireland factors and its burden-shifting scheme do not apply to relocation issues arising when the initial custody determination is made.”

- Wilson v. Wilson, 38 Conn. App. 263, 269, 661 A.2d 621 (1995). “It is statutorily incumbent upon a court entering orders concerning custody or visitation or a modification of such order to be guided by the best interests of the child.”

- Garrett’s Appeal from Probate, 44 Conn. Supp. 169, 187, 677 A.2d 1000 (1994). “Moreover, the court finds that the defendant’s ‘parental acts or deficiencies’ support the conclusion that he should not, in the children's best interests, be their guardian at this time, based on the evidence of events transpiring up to the dates of the Probate Court hearings.”

- Knock v. Knock, 224 Conn. 776, 788-789, 621 A.2d 267 (1993). “[Conn. Gen. Stats.] Section 46b-56(b) does not require that the trial court award custody to whomever the child wishes; it requires only that the court take the child's wishes into consideration.”

- Cappetta v. Cappetta, 196 Conn. 10, 16, 490 A.2d 996 (1985). “In the search for an appropriate custodial placement, the primary focus of the court is the best interest of the child, the child’s interest in sustained growth, development, well-being, and in continuity and stability of its environment.”

- Seymour v. Seymour, 180 Conn. 705, 712, 433 A.2d 1005 (1980). “While psychological parenting is thus one indicator of the best interest of a child, a court has an independent responsibility to assure itself of the suitability of the parent to whom the child is primarily attached.”

- Hall v. Hall, 186 Conn. 118, 124, 439 A.2d 447 (1982). The plaintiff’s wilful disobedience of these court orders . . . evidenced gross disrespect for the law and raised questions about her character, which are relevant to the welfare of the child.”

- Yontef v. Yontef, 185 Conn. 275, 281, 440 A.2d 899 (1981). “We have never held, and decline now to hold, that a trial court is bound to accept the expert opinion of a family relations officer. As in other areas where expert testimony is offered, a trial court is free to rely on whatever parts of an expert’s opinion the court finds probative and helpful.”

- Ridgeway v. Ridgeway, 180 Conn. 533, 541, 429 A.2d 801 (1980). “In this case, the evidence showed that the children were living in a familiar and stable environment with love and attention from their paternal grandparents; that the plaintiff at times had an adverse effect upon the children; and that the plaintiff’s psychological instability was such that it posed a threat to the children’s well-being.”

- Trunik v. Trunik, 179 Conn. 287, 288, 426 A.2d 274 (1979). “. . . the trial court’s order changing the award of custody was based on evidence which revealed: (1) that the plaintiff father had remarried and he and his present wife were capable of caring for his children; and (2) that while the children were home, the defendant mother, inter alia, frequently entertained a variety of nocturnal male visitors.”

- Pi v. Delta, 175 Conn. 527, 533, 400 A.2d 709 (1978). “Similarly, in accordance with this court’s constant emphasis upon consideration for the welfare of minor children, legitimate or not, we perceive no valid reason for denying the admitted natural father of an illegitimate child at the least the opportunity to obtain a judicial determination of custody where, as here, there is an allegation that the present custodian is unfit and that the interests of the children will best be served by a change in custody.”

Section 3: Custody Orders and Presumptions in Connecticut

SCOPE: Bibliographic sources relating to custody arrangements in Connecticut that the court may determine to be in the best interest of the child, including joint, sole or third party custody. Also presumptions in Connecticut that joint custody is in the best interest of the child to joint custody and that the best interest of child to be in the custody of the parent.

DEFINITION:
- Joint Custody: “means an order awarding legal custody of the minor child to both parents, providing for joint decision-making by the parents and providing that physical custody shall be shared by the parents in such a way as to assure the child of continuing contact with both parents. The court may award joint legal custody without awarding joint physical custody where the parents have agreed to merely joint legal custody.” CONN. GEN. STATS. § 46b-56a(a) (2013)
- Joint Custody Presumption: “There shall be a presumption, affecting the burden of proof, that joint custody is in the best interests of a minor child where the parents have agreed to an award of joint custody or so agree in open court at a hearing for the purpose of determining the custody of the minor child or children of the marriage. If the court declines to enter an order awarding joint custody pursuant to this subsection, the court shall state in its decision the reasons for denial of an award of joint custody.” CONN. GEN. STAT. §§ 46b-56a(b) (2013).
- Sole Custody: “The difference between a sole custodian and a joint legal custodian is that the sole custodian has the ultimate authority to make all decisions regarding a child’s welfare, such as education, religious instruction and medical care whereas a joint legal custodian shares the responsibility for those decisions.” Emerick v. Emerick, 5 Conn. App. 649, 657 n.9, 502 A.2d 933 (1985).
- Third Party Custody: “. . . any other custody arrangements as the court may determine to be in the best interests of the child.” Conn. Gen. Stats. § 46b-56(b)(4) (2013).
- Presumption Re Best Interest of Child To Be In Custody Of Parent: In any dispute as to the custody of a minor child involving a parent and a nonparent, there shall be a presumption that it is in the best interest of the child to be in the custody of the parent, which presumption may be rebutted by showing that it would be detrimental to the child to permit the parent to have custody. CONN. GEN. STATS. § 46b-56b (2013).

STATUTES:
  (b). There shall be a presumption, affecting the burden of proof, that joint custody is in the best interests of a minor child where the parents have agreed to an award of joint custody or so agree in open court at a hearing for the purpose of determining the custody of the minor child or children of the marriage. If the court declines to enter an order awarding joint custody pursuant to this subsection, the court shall state in its decision the reasons for denial of an award of joint custody.

§ 46b-56b. Presumption re best interest of child to be in custody of parent.

(b) In any dispute as to the custody of a minor child involving a parent and a nonparent, there shall be a presumption that it is in the best interest of the child to be in the custody of the parent, which presumption may be rebutted by showing that it would be detrimental to the child to permit the parent to have custody.

COURT CASES

- Fish v. Fish, 285 Conn. 24, 25, 939 A.2d 1040 (2008). “A nonparent seeking custody must prove by a fair preponderance of the evidence that he or she has a relationship with the child akin to that of a parent and that parental custody clearly would be detrimental to the child because it would be damaging, injurious or harmful for the child to remain in the parent’s custody, rather than proving those facts by clear and convincing evidence, which is the standard of proof that this court adopted in Roth for third party visitation cases and the standard of proof that the defendant urged this court to adopt for custody disputes involving nonparents; the legislature rejected the clear and convincing standard of proof in enacting § 46b-56b, and the fair preponderance standard comported with notions of due process and fundamental fairness.”

- Zitnay v. Zitnay, 90 Conn. App. 71, 77, 875 A.2d 71 (2005). “Joint legal custody involves equal sharing of decisions regarding a child’s welfare, such as education, religious instruction and medical care.”

- Doe v. Doe, 244 Conn. 403, 455, 710 A.2d 1297 (1998). “As these authorities make clear, the presumption does not mean that the nonparent must, in order to rebut it, prove that the parent is unfit. It means that the parent has an initial advantage, and that the nonparent must prove facts sufficient to put into issue the presumed fact that it is in the child’s best interest to be in the parent’s custody. Once those facts are established, however, the presumption disappears, and the sole touchstone of the child’s best interests remains irrespective of the parental or third party status of the adults involved. In that instance, then, neither adult - the parent or the third party - enjoys any advantage or suffers any disadvantage as a result of his or her parental or third party status.”

- Schult v. Schult, 40 Conn. App. 675, 676, 672 A.2d 959 (1996). “The principal issue in this appeal is the proper construction and application of General Statutes §46b-56b, which creates a rebuttable presumption ‘that it is in the best interest of the child to be in the custody of the parent’ in any dispute as to the custody of a minor child involving a parent and a nonparent.”

- Antedomenico v. Antedomenico, 142 Conn. 558, 562, 115 A.2d 558 (1955). “The contest is not one primarily to determine the rights of the respective parties but rather the best interest of the child.”

Section 4: Parental Responsibility Plan

A Guide to Resources in the Law Library

SCOPE:
Bibliographic sources relating to the parental responsibility plan

DEFINITION:
- PARENTAL RESPONSIBILITY PLAN: "In any proceeding before the Superior Court involving a dispute between the parents of a minor child with respect to the custody, care, education and upbringing of such child, the parents shall file with the court, at such time and in such form as provided by rule of court, a proposed parental responsibility plan that shall include, at a minimum, the following: (1) A schedule of the physical residence of the child during the year; (2) provisions allocating decision-making authority to one or both parents regarding the child’s health, education and religious upbringing; (3) provisions for the resolution of future disputes between the parents, including, where appropriate, the involvement of a mental health professional or other parties to assist the parents in reaching a developmentally appropriate resolution to such disputes; (4) provisions for dealing with the parents’ failure to honor their responsibilities under the plan; (5) provisions for dealing with the child’s changing needs as the child grows and matures; and (6) provisions for minimizing the child’s exposure to harmful parental conflict, encouraging the parents in appropriate circumstances to meet their responsibilities through agreements, and protecting the best interests of the child.”

Conn. Gen. Stats §46b-56a(d) (2013)

STATUTES:
- CONN. GEN. STATS. (2013)
  - Chapter 815j. Dissolution of marriage, legal separation and annulment §46b-56a. “... Subject to the provisions of section 46b-56a, the court may assign parental responsibility for raising the child to the parents jointly, or may award custody to either parent or to a third party, according to its best judgment upon the facts of the case and subject to such conditions and limitations as it deems equitable. The court may also make any order granting the right of visitation of any child to a third party to the action, including, but not limited to, grandparents.”

COURT CASES
- Bock v. Bock, No. FST FA 05 4005415 S (Conn. Super. Ct., J.D. Stamford-Norwalk, Aug.15, 2006) “The parties shall use their best efforts to enter into a written Parenting Responsibility Plan. Until such Parenting Responsibility Plan is entered as an order of the Court, the following are the Court orders: The parties shall have joint legal custody of the minor children. In the event of any disagreement between the parties as to the minor children, the wife shall have the final decision-making authority. The children will reside primarily with the wife. The husband will have reasonable and flexible visitation and access to all the children.”

- Brooks v. Brooks, No. FA05-4002166S (Conn. Super. Ct., J.D. New London at New London, Mar. 24, 2006) “The parties have entered into parental responsibility plan concerning the minor children. This agreement is approved by the court, found to be in the best interest of the children and is incorporated by reference in the court's decree.”
Section 5: The Psychological Parent

SCOPE: Bibliographic sources relating to the identification of a child's psychological parent.

DEFINITION:

- "While psychological parenting is thus one indicator of the best interest of a child, a court has an independent responsibility to assure itself of the suitability of the parent to whom the child is primarily attached."

COURT CASES

- In re Jordan T., 119 Conn. App. 748, 760, 990 A.2d 346, 353 (2010). "...the respondent's argument relies on evidence in the record tending to show that Jordan misses the respondent and is sad to be separated from her. She also refers to the report of Mantell that Jordan has several psychological parents, with the respondent being the first, the maternal aunt as the second and the foster mother as the third, and argues that the fact that Jordan is more closely bonded to the respondent shows that termination of the respondent's parental rights is not in Jordan's best interest."

- In Re Brea B., 75 Conn. App. 466, 473, 816 A.2d 707 (2003). "The child experienced her great aunt, rather than her mother, as her psychological parent and expressed a clear preference to have no further contact with her mother. On the basis of the foregoing, we conclude that the court's finding that there was no ongoing parent-child relationship was not clearly erroneous."

- Azia v. Dilascia, 64 Conn. App. 540, 552-553, 780 A.2d 992 (2001). "The fact that the defendant had been the child's primary psychological parent and caretaker in the past was relevant but was not dispositive on the issue of physical custody. Our Supreme Court in Blake v. Blake, supra, 207 Conn. 224-25, specifically indicated that an evaluation of the past was not enough. Although the mother had been important in the past and the father had not been as involved in the child's life for her first several years, he had become very involved in her life at the time of trial. The child's own therapist acknowledged that both parties were psychological parents of the child. We conclude that the court properly applied the standard established in Blake."

- Temple v. Meyer, 208 Conn. 404, 410, 544 A.2d 629 (1988). "Even if the plaintiff had demonstrated that he has been . . . psychological parent, such a finding would not have demonstrated that visitation continued to be in the best interest of the child."

- Seymour v. Seymour, 180 Conn. 705, 711, 433 A.2d 1005 (1980). " . . . the concept of the psychological parent is not a fixed star by which custody decisions can invariably be guided."

SCOPE:

STATUTES:
§ 46b-56(b). “In making or modifying any order as provided in subsection (a) of this section, the rights and responsibilities of both parents shall be considered and the court shall enter orders accordingly that serve the best interests of the child and provide the child with the active and consistent involvement of both parents commensurate with their abilities and interests. Such orders may include, but shall not be limited to: (1) Approval of a parental responsibility plan agreed to by the parents pursuant to section 46b-56a; (2) the award of joint parental responsibility of a minor child to both parents, which shall include (A) provisions for residential arrangements with each parent in accordance with the needs of the child and the parents, and (B) provisions for consultation between the parents and for the making of major decisions regarding the child's health, education and religious upbringing; (3) the award of sole custody to one parent with appropriate parenting time for the noncustodial parent where sole custody is in the best interests of the child; or (4) any other custody arrangements as the court may determine to be in the best interests of the child.”

COURT CASES
- Azia v. Dilascia, 64 Conn. App. 540, 546, 780 A.2d 992 (2001). “The defendant first claims that the court improperly failed to consider the child's desire to live with her mother. Specifically, the defendant argues that the court improperly discounted the child's preference without finding that the child was not of a sufficient age or was incapable of forming an intelligent preference. We disagree.”
- Knock v. Knock, 224 Conn. 776, 788, 621 A.2d 267 (1993). “Section 46b-56(b) does not require that the trial court award custody to whomever the child wishes; it requires only that the court take the child’s wishes into consideration.”
- Faria v. Faria, 38 Conn. Supp. 37, 40, 456 A.2d 1205 (1982). “In this case it is concluded that the minor child, five years old, at the time of the hearing, is not of sufficient age or capable of forming an intelligent preference.
- Gennarini v. Gennarini, 2 Conn. App. 132, 137, 477 A.2d 674 (1984). “First, whether the child's preferences and feelings as to custody and visitation are a significant factor in the court's ultimate determination of the best interest of the child will necessarily depend on all the facts of the particular case, including the child's age and ability intelligently to form and express those preferences and feelings.”

  "In the exercise of its awesome responsibility to find the most salutary custodial arrangement for the children of divorce, the court must however take account of the parents' past behavior, since it must evaluate their present and future parenting ability and the consistency of their parenting for the purpose of determining which parent will better foster the children's growth, development and well-being."
- Seymour v. Seymour, 180 Conn. 705, 713, 433 A.2d 1005 (1980). "Once it is definitively established . . . that each parent is loving, caring and otherwise suitable, the court must look to other factors to come to a decision about custody. The court was not in error in basing its award of custody to the mother on . . . her willingness to facilitate visitation by the father."
