2013-14 Annual Report
Dear Friends,

The 2013-14 year at Hochstein was rich with shared experiences in learning and making music and dance, a year in which we gave opportunities to students of all ages, levels of experience and ability, and backgrounds. Throughout these pages you will see a few highlights, from just some of the many stories we could tell.

One story stands out for me. At a small gathering of several long-time supporters of the school, two of our students—one currently in high school, the other an accomplished alumna who was with us several years ago—performed beautifully, accompanied by a member of the piano faculty. Each student spoke with us about what being at Hochstein has meant to her, and those were Hochstein moments, to be sure. But later that evening, the alumna—now a young teacher herself—was talking to the faculty about the challenges she was experiencing in teaching children of varying backgrounds and abilities. He said, ‘I have felt that challenge, myself. But once I realized what my students really need, the teaching became very easy. Yes, they need my knowledge and experience but mostly they need me to approach them with love and kindness, and to meet them just where they are. It changed everything in my teaching.’ Now, I’ve worked with this faculty member for quite a few years, and I felt that challenge, myself. But once I realized what my students really need, the teaching became very easy. Yes, they need my knowledge and experience but mostly they need me to approach them with love and kindness, and to meet them just where they are. It changed everything in my teaching.”

Throughout these pages you will see a few highlights, from just some of the many stories we could tell.

We have so much to celebrate: a faculty who are not only talented but dedicated to their students; a devoted administrative staff, who keep the vision of the School foremost in their minds and hearts; a strong Board of Directors who exemplify commitment; and many generous friends in the community. Thank you to all the individuals, foundations and corporations who make these Hochstein stories possible.

Hochstein Stories

Abigail Noel, Hochstein Youth Symphony Orchestra Concertmaster, says Hochstein gives everyone an opportunity to shine, regardless of age or stage of maturity in music. She attended the Sphinx Performance Academy at Oberlin College last year, a full scholarship to prepare or aspiring Black and Latino teenage string players.

THANK YOU TO OUR DONORS IN THE 2013-2014 SCHOOL YEAR

We gratefully acknowledge those listed below who give so generously of their time, talent, services, and dollars to support Hitchcock. Our continued growth and success is a direct reflection of their thoughtful patronage.

The following list includes gifts received between July 1, 2013 and June 30, 2014 through direct contributions and charitable designations. (Multiple gifts and gifts that were matched by employers have been combined for each donor.)

While we appreciate all gifts, due to space constraints, only those of $500 or more have been listed. If you have any questions regarding your gift to Hitchcock or if your name was inadvertently omitted, please contact Director of Development Whitney Blake at (855) 444-4003 ext. 23.

Dear Friends,

The 2013-14 year at Hochstein was rich with shared experiences in making music and dance, a year in which we gave opportunities to students of all ages, levels of experience and ability, and backgrounds. Throughout these pages you will see a few highlights, from just some of the many stories we could tell.

One story stands out for me. At a small gathering of several long-time supporters of the school, two of our students—one currently in high school, the other an accomplished alumna who was with us several years ago—performed beautifully, accompanied by a member of the piano faculty. Each student spoke with us about what being at Hochstein has meant to her, and those were Hochstein moments, to be sure. But later that day, I was moved again—performed beautifully, accompanied by a member of the piano faculty.

The mission of the David Hochstein Memorial Music School is to provide people of all ages, backgrounds, and abilities with access to excellent music and dance education in a community that nurtures and encourages personal achievement.

Dr. Margaret (Peggy) Quackenbush, President & Executive Director
