INTRODUCTION

This booklet is intended to help language assistants and host schools prepare for the assistantship and to provide a source of reference and information for both language assistants and their employers during the year.

Most of the information applies to language assistants from every country. Where the information is specific to any one country, this is clearly indicated. For simplicity we use the word ‘school’ for all kinds of institutions to which language assistants may be appointed.

The main school that language assistants work in, which is most likely the school making the first contact with them, is referred to as the host school. If language assistants have any queries about entitlement to medical insurance or unemployment benefit in their own country following their assistantship in the UK, they should remember to check with the relevant organisation(s) in their home country before they leave home.

1.01 Terms and conditions of the job – frequently asked questions

How long is the assistantship contract?
Apart from language assistants from China, the assistantship appointment runs from 1 September (posts in Scotland and Northern Ireland) or 1 October (posts in England and Wales) to 31 May unless an earlier starting date and/or a later finishing date has been agreed with the language assistant’s local authority/host school. Language assistants from China usually work from mid-September to 30 June. Modern Language Assistant (MLA) contracts may be extended for an additional period of up to four weeks. This may be before or after the standard period of appointment. This must be agreed between the MLA and the employer in advance. Please notify the British Council if this is agreed.

What is the status of a language assistant?
Language assistants do not have the status of a student except in the matter of Council Tax (see Section 1.14). In all other respects the status of a language assistant is that of a paid employee.

Who is a language assistant’s employer?
Language assistants are employed by either the host school or the local authority. Language assistants are not employed or paid by the British Council. Employers have the same right of dismissal over their language assistant as over other members of staff. If a breach of the rules or gross misconduct occurs, it is up to the school to assess the severity of this and then deal with it in accordance with their own procedures. Should any problems arise with the language assistant, employers must ensure the British Council is informed immediately. The British Council is responsible for informing the appropriate authorities abroad whenever disciplinary action is to be taken against a language assistant, and it is therefore essential that the correct procedure is followed. Local authorities and/or schools are asked to provide professional and administrative inductions to their language assistants and to monitor their progress on a regular basis.

How much is a language assistant’s allowance?
The current rates for 2015–16 will be available on our website as soon as they are available. Please note that the monthly allowance is based on the standard 12 hours and any extra is to be paid pro rata.

How many hours do language assistants work per week?
Language assistants normally work 12 class contact hours each week. If a language assistant is asked to work additional class contact hours, and they agree, they should be paid for the extra hours on a pro rata basis, up to a maximum of 18 hours per week in total. Lesson preparation time is in addition to the 12 contact hours.

In the case of language assistants from non-EU countries, under the Home Office’s immigration rules, permission for additional hours must also be sought from the British Council.

Although it cannot be guaranteed, the timetable should be blocked to allow reasonable free time and where possible, one full day free per week.

Do language assistants get an official contract?
Language assistants should receive and sign a Statement of Employment which constitutes their employment contract from either their host school or local authority. It is a legal requirement (Employment Rights Act 1996) that this information is given to an employee in writing within two months of their start date. The best practice is for this to be signed as soon as the language assistant arrives at school, and for two copies to be printed, each of them signed by each party.
How many schools can a language assistant work in?
Language assistants may be required to work in more than one school: language assistants are often shared between two or three neighbouring institutions depending on the sharing arrangements. If a language assistant works in more than one school, one of them acts as the ‘host school’ and will be responsible for co-ordinating a timetable and providing administrative support. Please note that MLAs should only be working in a maximum of three schools, and that if they travel between schools on the same day the school should provide travel expenses. A named member of staff will be designated as the language assistant’s mentor, and will normally be based in their host school. The host school is responsible for paying the salary, which is then reimbursed by the other sharing schools if applicable.

Does a language assistant get holidays?
Language assistants will have the same fully paid holidays as the other teaching staff in their school, and are expected to be present during term time. The host school is responsible for paying the salary, which is then reimbursed by the other sharing schools if applicable.

Can language assistants extend their contracts for a second year?
The British Council and our overseas partner agencies abroad only allow language assistants from France to remain for a second year, as for all other countries there is a long waiting list of candidates every year wanting to gain experience in the UK and we must give priority to these first-time applicants. Please refer to the British Council for further information.

GETTING PREPARED
1.02 Familiarisation with the UK education systems
The United Kingdom is comprised of four countries: England, Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales, each with their own education system. We recommend that language assistants familiarise themselves with the system of the country to which they are allocated.

1.03 Thinking ahead about the role of a language assistant

Language assistants are native speakers who bring the language and culture of their country to the classroom. They should therefore use every opportunity to help make language learning relevant and fun for their pupils. Keep in mind that some of the pupils with whom language assistants will be working, may never have visited the target language country or met a young person from it, so the more ‘real’ a language assistant can make their language learning experience, the better. Although it will depend on the class teacher(s) and the age of the pupils, language assistants can expect their tasks to include working together with a teacher in the classroom, working with small groups of pupils, helping to prepare pupils for oral examinations and contributing to cross-curricular work in collaboration with other subject areas.

However, since language assistants are unlikely to be trained teachers they should not be asked to, and should not, take sole responsibility for a whole class, supervise, deal with pupils’ discipline problems or take responsibility for marking pupils’ work or exam papers. Your MLA may wish to undertake an extended project during the year which can be highly beneficial for the school and create a lasting impact.

Compiling resource materials for lessons

One way of making language learning real for pupils is by bringing authentic materials from the target country into the classroom. Language assistants should take the opportunity to collect a variety of resources before leaving their home country. There are a lot of authentic materials that will come in useful for lessons, such as:

- photographs – the language assistant’s house, street, town or village, region, family, pets
- maps (for example of the language assistant’s home town and/or of countries where the language assistant’s language is an official language)
- tourist information – hotels, campsites, monuments, price lists, opening and closing times, museum tickets, tourist brochures and postcards
- music – popular and traditional
- easy to understand textbooks related to social themes or illustrating grammar points (for example, conditional tense)
- audio-visual aids – weather information, quiz shows, word games, soap operas (especially those known in the UK), adverts, cartoons
- television/cinema listings and reviews
- local newspapers, teen magazines with horoscopes, weather forecasts, minor news items, problem pages
- games
- photographs and character portraits of well-known actors/singers
- a school timetable/a school report
- transport timetables and tickets
- real menus from restaurants, price lists from bars
- empty packets – toothpaste, soup, chocolates, etc.

The more materials language assistants can find the better. Language assistants should think about what worked well for themselves personally as a language student and about which items they find interesting when in a foreign country (language assistants should keep in mind that the language level of their pupils may not be the same as the level of English of students in their country). Language assistants may wish to contact their school(s) before leaving their home country in order to find out if there is anything specific they should bring and to find out about topics they are likely to cover during their assistantship.

The British Council also provides online pedagogic support for language assistants. Language assistants and teachers are able to download teaching materials from the British Council website.

In addition, there are some guides produced by various cultural organisations, which also give information about aspects of life and education in the UK and are available in a variety of languages:

- Consolato Generale d’Italia, Londra (Consolato Generale d’Italia)
- Mallette pédagogique pour les assistants (French Institute)
- STEPS, Leitfaden für Fremdsprachenassistent(inn)en (Goethe-Institut)
- Information pages for Auxiliares de Conversación Español (Consejería de Educación)
- Reino Unido

What will the role involve?
Language assistants will usually be working in a secondary school either assisting the language teacher with the language classes or teaching small groups independently. We have a small number of posts in primary schools, sixth-form colleges and in colleges of further education. The role of a language assistant will be to improve students’ confidence in communicating in the target language and to help classes to become more interactive and fun by discussing contemporary aspects of culture in the target country, such as current affairs, education, sport, fashion, films, television, lifestyles and celebrations. Language assistants will do this by planning activities, games, using photos, travel guides and maps as well as texts from newspapers or the internet. At the same time, language assistants will improve their own language skills, learn how to become more effective communicators and experience living and working in the UK.

What will the job be like?
Although the role of a language assistant is fairly standard, every language assistant will have different experiences depending on the type of school they work in, the teachers, the students’ backgrounds, and the local area. Language assistants who are enthusiastic, keen and have lots of different ideas for activities and lessons are likely to benefit the most from their experience. However, a strong teacher support network is also crucial.

What is the UK like to live in?
The UK is a very diverse country. Most big cities have a multicultural population and a lot of people do not have English as a first language. Cities are usually lively with a lot to do, but are expensive to live in and can be impersonal at times. Smaller towns are cheaper to live in and often easier to make friends in. The UK is quite densely populated, so even in a small town, it is usually possible to reach a larger place quite easily, except in areas such as Cumbria and Northern Scotland.

Who do language assistants work with?
Schools must assign a mentor teacher to their MLA who will probably be a teacher in the modern foreign languages department. However, language assistants are also likely to work with other teachers in the department. Teachers in the UK tend to be very busy and don’t always have a lot of time to chat between lessons, but if language assistants make the effort, it is usually easy to make friends in school.

Do language assistants work in more than one school?
Possibly! Remember that it is not the British Council or the UK government but the school or local education office that pays a language assistant’s allowance. Language assistants may work in up to three different schools and some secondary schools may send their language assistant to work at a local primary school for a couple of hours a week.

What are the conditions like in schools in the UK?
Conditions vary from school to school and place to place. For example, if language assistants work in two schools, they may find one easier to work in than the other for a number of reasons. A lot of schools in inner-city areas may have more students from a variety of ethnic backgrounds whose first language is not English. Some schools have more discipline problems than others, so it is impossible to generalise. It will depend on the teachers and students in each and every school. Language assistants will almost certainly teach some classes together with the teacher and take some small groups independently. Language assistants are not responsible for overall discipline, but it is a good idea for language assistants to try to command respect from their students, while trying to be friendly at the same time.

What will the students’ level of ability be like?
Again, it is impossible to generalise, but the situation regarding foreign language learning is not the same in the UK as that of English in other countries. English is, in a sense, a world language and it would be more appropriate to compare the teaching of the second foreign language (after English) in the language assistant’s country to the teaching of foreign languages in the UK. Language assistants should probably not assume that the language level of their pupils is the same as the level of English of students in their own country. Some schools employ their language assistants to help the most able students prepare for university entry-level examinations; others employ language assistants to help prepare for oral examinations of the relevant school-leaving qualifications. The role of the language assistant will be to make language learning more interactive and fun, whatever level(s) they end up teaching and to build students’ confidence in communicating in the target language.

What is the climate like?
The climate is fairly similar from place to place within the UK, but northern areas tend to be a few degrees colder than southern areas. Current temperatures can be checked on the BBC weather website.

Is the allowance enough to live on?
The UK is fairly expensive compared to most European countries, but the allowance is quite generous for the number of hours worked (usually 12 per week). There are additional allowances for London, but living in London is still very expensive. Rent varies depending on the size of the town/city and the standard of the accommodation. Language assistants may be able to supplement their income by giving private lessons or doing a part-time job as long as these do not affect their working hours in school. However, this may affect their tax-exemption status. If a language assistant is not from an EU country, they can only work extra hours if they are working in a school and teaching; this cannot exceed 20 hours for non-EU language assistants. Non-EU language assistants can also work in jobs related to teaching (e.g. working with children or translation); they must provide the British Council with all the details of any additional work.

Language assistants should make sure that they bring enough money to live on (approximately £1,500–£2,000) until they receive their first payment, which should be at the end of the first month, but could be later.

What is the situation regarding accommodation?
Language assistants should understand that finding accommodation is ultimately their own responsibility. However, schools are encouraged to advise language assistants concerning accommodation queries. Advice regarding local areas and transport links, etc. is greatly appreciated. The language assistant’s settling-in period will be a lot smoother if schools are able to assist them in finding accommodation, even if only on a temporary basis, at a reasonable cost before their arrival.

The type of accommodation will vary. If living in a house with a family or renting someone’s room while they are away for a few months, language assistants will probably not have to provide their own bedding and cutlery, pots and pans etc. However, if renting a room in a shared house with other language assistants, students or workers, language assistants will probably have to provide their own. It is best to check this before moving in.

The British Council strongly advises MLAs not to sign rental agreements for accommodation before arrival in the UK.

Will language assistants have the opportunity to travel?
Yes. Language assistants will have half-term holidays as well as two weeks’ holiday at Christmas and Easter. The VisitBritain website can provide useful advice on what to see and do whilst in the UK. Schools are encouraged to compress working hours into a four-day timetable for language assistants, in order for them to benefit from a long weekend which provides them with a chance to travel and discover the UK.

PREPARING FOR THE LANGUAGE ASSISTANT’S ARRIVAL

1.04 Sharing arrangements
Where a language assistant is shared between two or three establishments, it is essential that a single host school be identified. The host school should:

- be the principal point of contact for personnel matters
- co-ordinate requests for the language assistant’s presence
- draw up the language assistant’s timetable and assist with travel arrangements
- arrange full payment for language assistant(s) and request reimbursement from partner schools – this is very important in order to avoid tax implications for the language assistants.

When drawing up sharing arrangements and timetables, schools are asked to ensure that travel between schools does not become unreasonable for the language assistant. Where local public transport is limited, it may be possible for school teachers to consider offering lifts to or from school. Where language assistants are required to travel to more than one school on the same day, the schools involved (or the local authority where applicable) should reimburse the language assistant’s additional travel expenses.

1.05 First contact between host school and language assistant
Language assistants should receive a letter or email in June or July from their employer, which will be the local authority or host school and not the British Council.
To secure the job, language assistants should reply immediately to this letter with the following information:

- a brief introduction to themselves, their interests and any previous teaching experience
- the address, telephone number and email address where they can be contacted until one month before they are due to start work (i.e. end of August or September)
- their full name(s) as stated on their passport before arrival
- the dates of any examinations during the academic year for which they may be obliged to return home.

Language assistants should ask the following questions:

- When should I arrive in the UK? (Language assistants will probably be expected to be in school on Tuesday 1 September 2015 (Scotland/Northern Ireland) or Thursday 1 October 2015 (England/Wales) unless they have agreed another starting date with the school. Language assistants will need to arrive earlier than these dates in order to settle in, and in most cases, secure accommodation.
- Can schools help me find accommodation, or give me advice? Language assistants should tell the school if they have any special dietary requirements or if they smoke or will have a car. However, language assistants should be realistic and remember it may not be possible for schools to meet all their requirements. It may be possible for schools to arrange temporary accommodation, for example in a hostel, in order to give language assistants time to find something more permanent. If the school has indicated that it is able to provide accommodation, language assistants should ask for the address and telephone number. See also the notes on finding accommodation in Section 1.10.
- What are the address and telephone number, email and website of the school?
- What are the contact details of my mentor teacher throughout the summer?
- Will I be working in one school or more than one?
- How many hours will I work?
- What will my allowance be?
- What type of school(s) will I be working in?
- How big is the school? How many pupils? How many teachers? How many teachers of my language are there?
- What is the social environment of the school?
- How old are the pupils? What is the age-range and language level of the pupils I will be working with?
- Does the school have a link with a school in my country?
- Would the school like me to bring any authentic materials such as photographs, maps, postcards, posters, etc., that I could put up in the classroom, or tourist brochures, magazines, newspapers, advertisements, information on festivals in my country?
- What is the name, address, telephone number and email address of the previous language assistant, i.e. my predecessor?
- How do I get to the school or my accommodation from the airport/station/port of arrival?
- What type of clothing will I be expected to wear in school?
1.06 Legal matters: police clearance and immigration

(A) Police clearance – from abroad
If language assistants have not included a police certificate in their original application, they must apply for a police certificate from their country of origin and give it to their local authority or school on their first day or earlier if requested. The police certificate must be dated in the last six months when language assistants present it. This is a very important document: schools – please make sure to request this from your language assistant(s) as soon as possible.

(B) Police clearance – from the UK authorities
It is an offence for an organisation to knowingly offer work in a childcare position to anyone who is on the children’s barred list. Therefore, a criminal record check must be carried out by the language assistant’s employer (host school or local authority). The type of criminal record check which will be carried out will vary depending on which region of the UK language assistants have been allocated to – please see the sections below for further information.

For this reason it is important for language assistants to comply with any requests from their employer and to provide the necessary information for this criminal record check. This applies to all language assistants, regardless of whether or not they have a history of previous residence in this country. This is in addition to the police certificate from their own country.

Schools that are the host schools should:

a. verify a language assistant’s identity on arrival (see below for acceptable documents)
b. give the language assistant the appropriate form to apply for an Enhanced DBS with children’s barred list (England and Wales), a criminal history disclosure through Access NI (Northern Ireland) or for membership of the PVG (Protection of Vulnerable Groups) Scheme (Scotland)
c. ensure that the language assistant’s form is fully completed and is accurate
d. submit the form to the appropriate authority (Disclosure and Barring Service in England and Wales, Access NI in Northern Ireland, or to Disclosure Scotland), together with the fee, if applicable (note: some schools cover the cost of the DBS check but sometimes language assistants must pay this fee themselves).

Language assistants will require the following documentation:

EU Nationals (including Switzerland):
- valid passport and EU national ID card
- bank/building society statement which has been issued in the last three months (UK or EEA) if no EU ID card
- bank/building society account opening confirmation letter with UK address

Non EU Nationals:
- valid passport
- visa
- bank/building society account opening confirmation letter with UK address

England and Wales (DBS check)
Only original documents are valid for the identity verification check: photocopies are not acceptable unless certified by a notary public. A foreign driving licence is not acceptable. All documents in the box above must be in the language assistant’s current name. At least one document must confirm the language assistant’s UK address at the time of application for the DBS check, and at least one document must confirm the language assistant’s date of birth. In Section C of the DBS application, language assistants must also provide (but not prove) all addresses where they have lived in the last five years, ensuring that there are no gaps in the dates between addresses. An application that has gaps in the dates between addresses will be rejected. Documents such as bank and credit card statements cannot be used unless they show the language assistant’s UK address at the time of application for the DBS check. Very few language assistants will be in a position at the start of their placement to offer these for their identity check. However, upon opening a bank account in the UK, the language assistant will receive a confirmation letter which will contain their UK address; therefore this letter can be used instead.

The language assistant’s ‘current’ UK address cannot be the address of the school unless they live at the school. However, the document required to show the address could be a letter from the head teacher (at the host school), on headed paper, confirming the language assistant’s address on the basis of a letter from the landlord. Please remember the employer is the host school and not the British Council.
Northern Ireland (AccessNI)
Only original documents are valid for the identity verification check: photocopies are not acceptable unless certified by a notary public. A foreign driving licence is not acceptable.

All Group 1 documents must be in the language assistant’s current name. At least one document must confirm the language assistant’s UK address at the time of application for the AccessNI check, and at least one document must confirm the language assistant’s date of birth. In section E of the application form language assistants must also provide (but not prove) all addresses where language assistants have lived in the last five years, ensuring that language assistants leave no gaps in the dates between addresses. An application that has gaps in the dates between addresses will be rejected.

Documents such as bank and credit card statements cannot be used unless they show the language assistant’s UK address at the time of application for the AccessNI check, very few language assistants will be in a position at the start of their placement to offer these for their identity check as they will not have had sufficient time to open a bank account.

Language assistant’s ‘current’ UK address (Section D of the form) cannot be the address of the school unless they live at the school. However, the document required to show the address could be a letter from the head teacher/principal (host school), on headed paper, confirming the address on the basis of a letter from the landlord.

Question B11 can be left blank. It is not mandatory information since language assistants may not have a permanent National Insurance number at the start of the academic year.

Section H (Responsible Body Information) should state the host/lead school, NOT the British Council.

Scotland (PVG Scheme)
The Protection of Vulnerable Groups (Scotland) Act 2007 (PVG scheme) came into force on 28 February 2011 and replaced enhanced disclosures for those working with vulnerable groups. Like its predecessor, it is designed to ensure that people who have a known history of harmful and abusive behaviour are not put in positions of trust with vulnerable people. It is managed by Disclosure Scotland. This applies to all language assistants, regardless of whether or not they have a history of previous residence in this country. This is in addition to the police clearance from their home country.

The procedure for this must be undertaken by the employer: a local authority or independent school. It is assumed that these are already registered bodies with Disclosure Scotland. The employer should:

1. verify the language assistant’s identity on arrival (see below for acceptable documents)
2. give the language assistant the form to apply for membership of the PVG scheme
3. ensure that both the language assistant and the employer have completed the relevant parts fully and accurately
4. submit the form to Disclosure Scotland together with the fee.

It is up to the employer to decide what constitutes sufficient evidence of identity. The code of practice issued by Scottish ministers recommends three forms of identification, one of which should be photographic, one with proof of address, and one other.

Documentation that has been cleared with Disclosure Scotland as acceptable includes any of the following, of which THREE are required:

- passport
- national ID card (EU or non-EU) – please note that while ID cards are acceptable, employers should be aware of potential forgeries and value the ID card based upon the country of origin
- birth certificate
- driving licence (including foreign driving licence)
- school leaving exam certificate or university exam certificate
- letter from landlord or hostel confirming address
- marriage certificate
- work permit/visa (less than 12 months old)
- UK National Insurance card (if the language assistant has previously worked in the UK)
- UK utility or Council Tax bills (if a second year language assistant from France)
- (for Chinese language assistants only) letter from Chinese head teacher confirming the language assistant’s identity and position within their school.

It is strongly recommended that employers ask for all documents to be originals, or copies certified by a notary public. Please inform language assistants whether documents in the original language will be acceptable, bearing in mind that it can be very expensive to have these translated. At least one document must confirm the language assistant’s date of birth, and one must include a photograph. Employers should also be satisfied of proof of current address at the time of application in the UK. It is at the employer’s discretion what proof is required for this.

Please note these documents need only be shown to the employer, and should not be submitted to Disclosure Scotland unless requested by them. Disclosure Scotland has a service-level agreement to produce 90 per cent of all types of disclosure for a correctly completed application with no further enquiries, within 14 calendar days. A turnaround time of approximately nine days... should be expected for a correctly completed Police Act Disclosure application with no further enquiries. PVG Scheme applications with no further enquiries should expect a turnaround time of approximately 15 days. This is measured from the day they receive the application to the day of despatch. Applications that are sent via a registered body or an umbrella body can spend time being processed by these organisations prior to being received at Disclosure Scotland. For further information, see the Disclosure Scotland website.

Please note that processing times will vary across the UK.

Language assistants from countries within the EU/EEA and Switzerland
These language assistants will be allowed to enter the UK on presentation of a valid passport or national identity card.

1.07 Language assistants from countries outside the EU/EEA
Language assistants from outside the European Union (EU) or the European Economic Area (EEA) will need a visa to enter the UK. Non-EU language assistants and their host schools must read this section carefully as it contains important guidance which language assistants must follow to comply with the rules of their visa.

This section is relevant to language assistants from the following countries:

- Argentina
- Canada
- Chile
- China
- Colombia
- Ecuador
- Mexico
- Russia
- Assistants from EU countries travelling to the UK on a non-EU passport

Language assistants coming to the UK from a non-EU country who have dual nationality with an EU member state should check with the organisation that co-ordinates the language assistants programme in their home country which passport they should use to travel to the UK, as it may be that they do not require a visa.

Things to check before applying for a visa

Visa processing times
Visa processing times vary from country to country; it can take up to two months for language assistants to receive their visa, and delays are common at certain times of year. If language assistants are experiencing delays in receiving their visas and think they may arrive in the UK later than expected, they should inform the British Council and their host school as soon as possible.

Visa start and end dates
It is the language assistant’s responsibility to ensure that their visa is valid for the full duration of their assistantship, and to report any errors they think may have been made with their visa as soon as possible. Most Tier 5 visas end around two weeks after the language assistant’s contract at school; if a language assistant’s visa is significantly longer than this, the language assistant must contact the British Council immediately and we will advise you how to rectify the error.

Under Tier 5 visa rules, language assistants are allowed 28 days’ additional stay in the UK outside of their official language assistant appointment dates (only 14 of these days can be taken before the assistantship begins). Please note that the distribution of these days may vary, therefore language assistants should discuss this possibility during their biometric appointment in their home country.

Please note that the dates stated on the visa already include these additional 28 days. Language assistants must leave the UK on or before the date their visa expires. Therefore, we strongly advise language assistants do not book their flights until they have received their visa.

Please note that the visa language assistants receive initially will be a short-term one (called a vignette) that will be included as a page in their passport. This vignette will be valid for 30 days, and will allow the language assistant to travel to the UK. Upon arrival in the UK, assistants must collect a Biometric Residence Permit, which includes their biometric information and can be used as proof of their right to work in the UK. Please see the Biometric Residence Permit section for full details.

How to obtain a visa
All British Council language assistants from outside the EU/EEA will need to apply for a Tier 5 (Temporary Worker) Government Authorised Exchange Visa, issued under the UK Visas and Immigration’s points-based system. The British Council in the UK will act as the sponsor for this visa.

As the visa sponsor, the British Council will assign each non-EU language assistant a Certificate of Sponsorship (CoS), which is a unique reference number that they will need to apply for their visa. The CoS will appear on a certificate called a T5 Confirmation of Maintenance Form, which the British Council will send to language assistants by email during the summer before they begin their assistantship. We can only send language assistants this document once we have received a written offer letter from the language assistant’s host school in the UK, and a written acceptance from the language assistant. We therefore appreciate the co-operation of host schools in sending their language assistant an offer letter as soon as possible in order to avoid delays in language assistants applying for their visas.
It is essential that language assistants pay the Immigration Health Surcharge (see below) and apply for a visa as soon as they have received the CoS. This is because the unique reference number will expire within three months of issue and visa applications will be refused if the number is not used within that time. The British Council will send language assistants full instructions on how to complete the online visa application process in the summer before they begin their assistantship.

Immigration Health Surcharge
The UK government has recently introduced an additional charge for those applying for a visa to come to the UK. The additional charge is called the Immigration Health Surcharge (IHS) and is a one-off payment of £200.

Language assistants must make the payment of £200 before submitting their visa application or booking a biometric appointment. Anyone who does not pay the surcharge before submitting their visa application will not be granted a visa, and applicants who pay the incorrect amount will experience significant delays in their visa application, meaning they may not arrive in the UK in time to begin their post.

Please note that the surcharge is not a visa fee; the payment will be collected by the Home Office and it will go directly into the National Health Service (NHS), giving language assistants access to the NHS on the same terms as a permanent UK resident during their time in the UK.

The British Council will send language assistants full instructions on how to pay the IHS along with the visa guidelines during the summer.

Biometric Residence Permit
From 2015, all non-EU language assistants are required to obtain a Biometric Residence Permit (BRP) upon arrival in the UK. The BRP can be used as proof of identity, and of the language assistant’s right to work in the UK. Language assistants do not have to apply for the BRP separately; they will be asked to provide all the necessary personal data (including photos, fingerprints and expected date of arrival in the UK) as part of the visa application process.

After applying for their visa, language assistants will be issued with the following documents:
- a Biometric Identity Document (BID) decision letter which sets out the leave granted and explains how language assistants should collect the BRP
- a short-term visa (called a vignette) in their passport. This vignette will have a validity of only 30 days from the expected date of travel to enable the assistant to travel to the UK and to collect their BRP.

Language assistants must collect their BRP from a Post Office branch within ten days of when they said they would arrive in the UK, even if they actually arrive later. Full information about the BRP and where to collect it can be found on their website: www.gov.uk/biometric-residence-permits/overview.

For comprehensive information on applying for Biometric Residence Permits from outside the UK, please consult the UK Visas and Immigration website.

Insurance
Although paying the IHS will entitle assistants to NHS treatment whilst in the UK, language assistants should still consider taking out insurance which covers other medical-related costs that may not be covered by the NHS. An insurance policy may cover, for example:
- costs of returning home if a relative is ill
- costs of a relative visiting UK if the language assistant falls ill
- cost of returning to their home country for treatment
- or in the worst possible situation returning a body home for burial.

Please note that there can be a long wait for certain NHS treatments, sometimes many months. An insurance policy which gives language assistants access to private medical care could give them much quicker access to the treatment they need. Language assistants who already have medical insurance in their home country should check whether they can extend it to cover their stay in the UK, as well as looking at options available from UK insurers. Please note that the British Council is unable to recommend particular insurance policies or companies; it is the assistant’s responsibility to investigate this themselves.

Police registration
Language assistants from some countries must register with the police in their local area within seven days of arrival in the UK, and re-register (within seven days) if they change their address during the year. If a language assistant is required to register, it will say ‘police registration within seven days’ on the visa page of their passport, so we advise language assistants and mentor teachers to check this page carefully.

Normally, all assistants from Argentina, China, Colombia and Russia must register with the police. However, there are some exceptions and this can change year on year so it is important that language assistants check their visas and the UK Visas and Immigration website to see if they are required to register or not.
We would advise all language assistants who are required to register with the police to contact their local police station immediately upon arrival in the UK to check the process for registering in their particular area.

Please see information about how to register with the police: www.gov.uk/register-with-the-police. Language assistants must read this information carefully to avoid breaking any immigration rules. Language assistants should also pay particular attention to where they should register (this differs across the UK) and which documents they should bring with them when they register.

Travelling outside of the UK during the assistantship

As the visa sponsor for non-EU language assistants, the British Council is required to keep a record of the dates that language assistants will be travelling outside of the UK during their assistantship. Language assistants from outside the EU who are planning on travelling abroad should inform the British Council in advance, using an online form which the British Council will send shortly after language assistants arrive in the UK. Please note that it is the language assistant’s responsibility to ensure they have the correct visa for the countries they are visiting before they travel; the British Council is unable to advise on this, so language assistants should investigate this themselves before they travel.

Induction days in the UK

There will be a number of language assistant induction days taking place across the UK in September and October, which are usually language-specific (except in Scotland and Northern Ireland). Language assistants will be invited to one of these days, depending on where they are working in the UK. Please note that it is the language assistant’s responsibility to choose which induction to attend. Induction days for some languages will be organised by the relevant cultural organisations in the UK and not the British Council, so please do not contact us in advance to request information about inductions as it may not yet be available. Language assistants will receive an invitation to an induction day as soon as possible after their arrival in the UK.

Documents to bring to induction days

As visa sponsor, the British Council is required to keep certified copies of the passports and visas of non-EU assistants. This means that we must a) have sight of the language assistant’s original passport and visa and b) collect photocopies of specific pages of the passport and visa, and sign them to confirm that we have seen the original copy.

In order for us to do this quickly and easily, we ask that non-EU language assistants bring the following documents with them to their induction day:

- their original passport, with visa page included
- photocopies of the following:
  - the front cover of the passport
  - the photo page of the passport
  - the visa page of the passport
  - the Biometric Residence Permit (if separate from the visa).

It is extremely important that you bring these documents with you to your induction. If you have any doubts about what you should bring then please contact us and we will be happy to advise you.

If a language assistant does not attend the induction days or does not bring the correct documents with them, then the British Council will not be able to certify their passports and visas. In these instances, a member of staff from the host school must certify the language assistant’s documents instead and send them to the British Council. Language assistants in this situation should inform the British Council and their mentor teacher as soon as possible, and we will send instructions regarding how to certify the documents correctly.

Proof of return

As the visa sponsor for non-EU assistants, the British Council must collect evidence that assistants have left the UK on or before their visa expiry date. Therefore, assistants are required to send the British Council a copy of their boarding pass from their flight home and/or the stamp in their passport that proves they have returned home safely. We will send full instructions about where to send proof of return towards the end of the language assistantship period.

We know that some language assistants plan to travel in Europe or elsewhere before returning to their home countries. Language assistants in this situation should still send us the boarding pass or stamp from their flight out of the UK (even if they are not going directly to their home country), to show that they have left the UK within their visa dates.

National Insurance number appointments

Please note that language assistants from outside the EU may not have to attend an appointment in order to obtain a National Insurance (NI) number, and instead may simply be asked to complete and send away some forms. Please see page 16 for full instructions on how to apply for an NI number.
1.08 Bringing a car to the UK
Normally, EU vehicles circulating temporarily within or between EU countries are limited to visits of six months in a 12-month period. If the vehicle remains in the UK for more than six months in a 12-month period, one is required by law to register it (UK number plates, UK insurance, fees to pay), and failure to register can lead to a substantial fine. The procedure on arrival for bringing one's car into the UK depends on whether the home country is in the EU or not. Further information is available online.

Language assistants who wish to bring a car to the UK with them should familiarise themselves with The Highway Code as soon as possible. These can be purchased in most bookshops and there is also an online version.

1.09 Planning the language assistant’s arrival: travel matters and personal insurance

For travel to/from the UK and for the language assistant’s time in the UK
We strongly recommend language assistants take out personal travel insurance to provide cover for both themselves and their possessions, in particular personal items of value for their journey to and from the UK, and for their stay in the UK. This should also include cover for emergency medical repatriation and personal liability (civil responsibility).

Language assistants should be included in the employer’s insurance policy for public and professional liability. In the event of an emergency or natural disaster, mentor teachers should check on the whereabouts of their language assistant(s) to ascertain that they are safe and well while in the UK.

For all language assistants outside of the EU – please visit the HM Revenue and Customs website and look at: ‘Bringing your belongings from outside the EU’ for further information and guidance.

For holidays outside the UK during the language assistantship period
If language assistants take holidays in other countries during the time of their residence in the UK, they are advised to take out additional travel insurance for these periods. For Non-EU and EEA holiday guidance, please see section 1.07

Transport
Language assistants arriving to the UK by plane, especially if arriving during a school day, must be aware that it may not be possible for someone to meet them at the airport. If this is the case, they should ask their school for directions and local train stations and do some research online.

Language assistants need to bring sufficient money with them to the UK or have access to funds to pay for rent (and perhaps a deposit) and other initial expenses before they receive their first month’s salary. Language assistants should expect to need around £1,500–£2,000.

1.10 Accommodation
Although a language assistant’s school may be able to help with finding accommodation, language assistants are in fact responsible for finding accommodation themselves. We therefore recommend that MLAs plan their arrival in the UK so that they have time to find suitable accommodation. It may be easier to move into temporary accommodation in the short term.

Language assistants can also try the following:
- if possible ask the school’s previous language assistant if they can offer any advice
- ask around at school and advertise on the staff notice board
- check university or other student notice boards
- look online on websites such as www.gumtree.com or www.flatshare.com or http://uk.easyroommate.com

Note: When moving into long-term accommodation we recommend language assistants take photographs of the room and the flat. This is to help retrieve any deposit they may have to pay, which is usually dependent on the accommodation being in the same condition as when the tenant first arrived.

Language assistants should not:
- advertise telephone numbers in public places
- sign any contract with an agency without finding out if there are any fees to pay
- language assistants should not sign any contracts or pay any money until they have seen the property in person.

Note: host schools will not pay for transport costs between accommodation and school, so language assistants must make sure they do not arrange accommodation too far away as travel could be expensive. However, if language assistants are working in more than one school and have to travel to both schools in one day, and have to pay higher transport costs, the schools should make a contribution to these costs.

If language assistants share accommodation with people other than language assistants or students, they may have to pay Council Tax. See Section 1.14.
1.11 Medical care and Statutory Sick Pay

Language assistants from countries within the EU/EEA

Language assistants from countries within the EU or EEA are entitled to treatment under the National Health Service (NHS) on the same basis as UK nationals. However, like other UK citizens and depending on which part of the UK they are posted to, they may have to pay for the following:

- prescriptions (each item on a prescription costs £8.05 in England, but is free in Wales, Northern Ireland and Scotland)
- dental treatment (note: it can be extremely difficult to register with a dentist that will provide NHS treatment, which is less costly than private dentistry services, so we strongly advise language assistants to have a dental check-up and any follow-up treatment in their home country prior to travelling to the UK)
- eye care or treatment, purchasing contact lenses or glasses, except in Scotland where eye tests are free.

Language assistants will need to prove their identity and work status, so taking their passport or ID card, offer of appointment letter and any other useful documents is a good idea.

Schools are asked to inform their language assistants about local medical services and to recommend that they register with a doctor as soon as possible. Language assistants from countries within the EU/EEA are entitled to everyday medical care on the same basis as UK residents. However, it is at the discretion of individual GPs whether they accept language assistants from countries outside the EU/EEA. Language assistants from Canada, China, Latin America and Russia may therefore be advised to take out private insurance. All language assistants receive free emergency treatment. Language assistants must check that their own insurance covers this. All language assistants are liable for prescription charges.

Every language assistant is entitled to Statutory Sick Pay (SSP), and to the full range of benefits once they have worked continuously for the same employer for 12 weeks. Language assistants should be made aware that SSP is significantly below their monthly allowance (currently £86.70 per week), which may be subject to change.

European Health Insurance Card (EHIC)

If EU language assistants have an EHIC from their own country, they should bring it with them. The amount deducted from their salary each month for National Insurance will also entitle them to an EHIC issued in the UK. (The application form for this is available from any UK post office or online). A UK-issued EHIC will entitle language assistants to free emergency treatment (not to full healthcare) when they return to their home country or visit another EU state while they are in official employment in the UK.

Assistants from outside the EU/EEA

For language assistants outside the EU and EEA, please see Section 1.07.

All language assistants

All language assistants should register with a local NHS health centre as soon as they arrive in the UK. Staff at the school may be able to recommend where to go. Note: the NHS does not cover emergency repatriation in the case of severe illness, accident or death.

MONEY MATTERS

1.12 Payment, Income Tax and National Insurance

Language assistants will receive a gross monthly payment directly from their host school – please refer to the link below for further details.

As soon as the language assistant has opened a bank account, they must give their account details to the person in their school or local authority in charge of staff pay. This may be a colleague working in human resources (HR) or the school bursar. Language assistants will usually be paid at the end of each month and will receive a payslip that shows their gross allowance (before deductions) and net allowance (after deductions). The host school should arrange full payment for the language assistant and request reimbursement from any partner schools. This avoids tax complications.

Payment and period of appointment

The rates of pay for 2015–16, including all London weightings will be posted on our website as soon as they are available.

The official period of appointment for Chinese language assistants in the UK is mid-September to end of June.

For all other language assistants, the period of appointment is as follows:

- England and Wales: 1 October to 31 May (eight months).
- Northern Ireland: 1 September to 31 May (nine months).
- Scotland: 1 September to 31 May (nine months).

The salary paid to language assistants is adequate to support one person only. Language assistants should remember to keep their payslips for reference in case they have any queries about pay or the deductions made. Language assistants may also need them in the future to prove to their home authorities – for pension purposes – that they spent a year working in the UK.
Income Tax

Following the raising of the tax-free personal allowance across the UK and due to the fact that the language assistantship contract is split across two financial years, most language assistants should now be exempt from paying Income Tax on their standard salary, as they will earn below the threshold in each financial year (£10,000 per annum). It is still essential, however, that language assistants are issued with the correct tax code from the tax office and they must complete the Starter Checklist as soon as possible after arrival in the UK. The language assistant’s local authority or school should have the forms. The form gives the UK tax authorities information about who the language assistants are and whether they should pay tax or not. The assistant’s local authority or school should send the completed Starter Checklist to the local tax office.

Language assistants from countries which have a double taxation agreement (with Teachers’ Article) with the UK – see list in Appendix I – should complete the covering letter for HM Revenue and Customs (provided by the British Council and available to download from our website). Language assistants should attach this to the New Starter Checklist and return it to the local authority or school. The language assistant should keep a photocopy of the completed form and accompanying letter in case of a future query regarding a possible tax refund. For more information please read Appendix I carefully.

Only the employer’s tax office can deal with problems and refunds: no other tax office can access the information. Please note that the British Council is not permitted to contact the HM Revenue and Customs on behalf of language assistants. Note: The British Council is unfortunately unable to help with individual enquiries. This is because we are not trained in tax, do not know about each individual’s background and current financial situation, and for data-protection reasons we are not allowed to contact the tax office on behalf of a language assistant; the tax office will only speak to the individual involved so language assistants have to call them directly – no one else can do this for them.

Possible questions relating to Income Tax – for the language assistant

National Insurance (NI)

(A) National Insurance payments

National Insurance has nothing to do with Income Tax. It is the UK equivalent of social security in other countries. It entitles language assistants, for example, to treatment under the National Health Service (NHS). Every employee in the UK has to pay National Insurance and this applies to language assistants too, even if they have insurance from their home country. If assistants have any problems relating to their NI payments, they should speak to their local authority or school as their employer. Language assistants should remember to check any queries about entitlement to healthcare or unemployment benefit in their own country following their language assistantship in the UK with their own authorities before they leave home.

(B) National Insurance number (NI number)

If the language assistant already has an NI number from previous work in the UK, they can use it again as it is valid for life. If not, they need to apply for their NI number as soon as possible on starting work. The card provides the language assistant with a unique number, which all employers must have in order to offer the assistant work and ensures that the language assistant does not pay too much tax on their wages. Currently, an amount of around £50 is deducted from a language assistant’s monthly allowance. This amount is slightly higher for language assistants based in London. All language assistants have the right to a NI number to enable the contributions they pay to be registered in the system. Language assistants need to apply for their NI number as soon as possible on starting their job. Language assistants should visit their local job centre for advice on the procedure to obtain one. Employers are no longer recommended to give language assistants temporary NI numbers as these cannot be used on the HM Revenue and Customs online tax return system.

Language assistants posted to Scotland
Language assistants should check with their local authority co-ordinator to see if a group booking has been arranged for them in their area in order to obtain an NI number. If not, they will need to contact JobCentre Plus on +44 (0)845 6000 643 to arrange an appointment. If language assistants are from a non-EU country and are applying for their NI number individually, they should mention their nationality and that they have a Tier 5 Visa when phoning for an interview, as it may be possible to apply by post instead of attending the interview. Language assistants should expect to travel up to an hour for an interview, but if they are more than one hour’s travelling distance from one of these sites they may be entitled to a ‘rural appointment’ at a JobCentre Plus office which is within a reasonable travelling distance.

Language assistants should emphasise to the JobCentre Plus staff when booking an appointment that they would prefer a rural interview if they are located in a more remote area.

When making an appointment, they should check what supporting documentation they will be required to take to the interview. Waiting times for interviews vary across the country, but the average time is around ten working days from phoning. Language Assistants should then receive their permanent National Insurance number around ten days after the interview. More information on National Insurance is available on the HM Revenue and Customs website.

1.13 Council Tax
Council Tax is a property tax based on both the value of the property (house or flat) and the number of adults living there. Language assistants are exempt from paying Council Tax as they are regarded as a student for Council Tax purposes when enrolled on the British Council programme. We will send every language assistant a British Council Certificate of Registration in their first month of employment so that they can prove their status as a language assistant as well as their exemption from paying Council Tax. Language assistants may need to show this certificate to their landlord, or send it to their local Council Tax office if they receive a letter from them demanding Council Tax payment.

No one in the language assistant’s property should be required to pay Council Tax providing everyone living there is a student or British Council language assistant. However, if the language assistant lives with anyone who is employed, they will be liable to pay Council Tax, and a Council Tax bill will be sent to the property.

Language assistants with a certificate of registration are not legally required to pay any of this bill, but may wish to help their flatmate(s) by contributing something towards the cost. If there is only one working person in the property, apart from the language assistant, they can apply for a Disregard Discount, which means that they are only required to pay 75 per cent of the full normal bill.

If language assistants have any queries about Council Tax when they are in the UK, they should ask their school or local authority, depending on who their employer is, for the address of the local Council Tax office, where they can go for further advice. They may also wish to consult the Citizens Advice website and select the appropriate country.

Note: if language assistants rent property before their assistantship contract starts or after it finishes, they will be liable to pay Council Tax for any days outside the exact dates of their contract. Council Tax is not applicable to language assistants based in Northern Ireland.

In summary:

Council Tax
Council Tax is a tax you pay on your accommodation and has nothing to do with the money you earn as a language assistant. As you are a language assistant on the official British Council programme, you do not have to pay Council Tax. Your certificate of registration proves that you are exempt from paying Council Tax only, and does not exempt you from any other tax.

National Insurance
National insurance is a tax which everyone who works in the UK must pay, including language assistants. This will be deducted automatically from your salary each month and will be around £50 per month.

Income Tax
Income Tax is a tax that everyone who works in the UK pays on the money they earn through employment. Language assistants from Spain should not have to pay income tax because a) you are covered by a double taxation agreement that exists between the UK and Spain, and b) you will not earn enough to have to pay income tax during the time you are working as a language assistant in the UK. However, please note that there is no specific exemption form for income tax. Your employer should be able to provide you with a New Starter Checklist (previously called the P46 form). You should fill this in and give it back to your school or local authority (whoever is your employer) and they will... send it to the tax office, who will then calculate how much tax you should pay (as mentioned before, this should be none). Please see page 15 of the Modern Language Assistants booklet for full details.

In addition, you should ensure that you have filled in the Double taxation Agreement form (if applicable) and attach this to your New Starter Checklist before you return it to your employer. There is a link to the Double taxation Agreement form on page 15 of the booklet.

1.14 Pensions

Language assistants are eligible for membership of the Local Government Pension Scheme (LGPS) and will automatically be enrolled into the scheme through the payroll section of their employer. However, they have the right to opt out of the scheme or not to join it at all. The host school or local authority must give you a guide to the Local Government Pension Scheme.

If language assistants join the scheme, they will have money deducted from their salary each month as contributions towards their pension.

The employer must give the language assistant a guide to the LGPS. If the language assistant does not wish to join the scheme, they must complete an opting-out form prior to their first month’s payroll run. If they join, they can opt out of membership and receive a refund of contributions provided they opt out within two years. A guide to the LGPS, together with the relevant membership forms should be sent to the language assistant with their offer of appointment letter or given to them with their statement of employment (contract).

Note: some local authorities process refunds via the payroll for those who opt out within the first month, whereas others process all refunds (including those for people who opt out with less than one month’s membership) via the pension fund.

1.15 Banking

The language assistant’s allowance will be paid directly into a UK bank account, so they must open one as soon as possible after their arrival and give the account details to the appropriate person in their local authority or school (for example, the finance officer or bursar).

Opening a bank account can be a difficult process for language assistants, as they are regarded as short-term clients. Please note that a decision on what is acceptable is often at the discretion of the individual branch. If a member of staff can accompany the language assistant when they first visit the bank, this may be helpful. When opening an account, the language assistants must bring the following documentation with them:

- passport or national identity card
- a letter of introduction from the local authority or host school. The letter of introduction should be on headed paper and if possible addressed to the specific bank and branch concerned. It should confirm:
  - the name, address and telephone number of a contact person who is responsible for the language assistant (for example the person writing the letter; most likely the mentor teacher)
  - language assistant’s name, address in their home country, address in the UK (even if a temporary address, such as a hostel), their position as a foreign language assistant, details of place of work and conditions of employment.

The British Council has been told that the above documents will normally be enough to open bank accounts with major UK-based banks.

As banks’ requirements vary, it is not possible to be absolutely definite about what documents they will accept. The documents that can be accepted may therefore differ from bank to bank. The best approach is to take with you as much information as you have available. Remember that banks will normally only accept original documents, not copies.

Please note that a decision on what is acceptable is often at the discretion of the individual branch. If the language assistant has any other documentation such as their lease if they have already moved into accommodation, birth certificate, photograph driving licence, a letter or recent statement from their bank at home or even their British Council Certificate of Registration, they should take this with them. Any recommendations for a local bank where it is known former language assistants or members of staff have banked successfully would be of great help to the language assistant.

THE ROLE AND RESPONSIBILITIES OF LANGUAGE ASSISTANTS AND HOST SCHOOLS

1.16 General school life – frequently asked questions

What is a mentor teacher?

Schools must appoint a mentor teacher for each language assistant – this does not need to be a principal teacher or head of department; it could be a young teacher who is not overcommitted elsewhere. Whoever the mentor teacher is, they should have a short meeting with the language assistant every week or two to ensure they are able to support them both personally and professionally, within reason.
Language assistants should be contacted by their mentor teacher before their arrival to arrange to meet on their first day at school or even beforehand. Mentor teachers will almost certainly be a member of the Modern Languages Department in the school. He or she will be the language assistant’s initial contact for any queries or problems they may have. If the school has not employed a language assistant previously, both language assistant and mentor should meet to discuss what language assistants can and cannot do, and to work out their role in the school. This should help avoid misunderstandings and encourage co-operation with staff.

How can language assistants meet people at school?

A language assistant’s mentor teacher should introduce the language assistant to key staff in school: the head teacher, deputy head, school secretary, bursar (finance officer in independent schools), principal teacher of modern languages or faculty head, and other teachers. Language assistants are just as much a member of staff as any other employee at the school and should be treated accordingly.

How can language assistants find their way around school?

Language assistants can ask to be shown around the school – even those areas where they might not normally teach. Language assistants should note the code of conduct for each classroom to see how pupils are expected to behave and can ask for a plan of the school buildings.

How can language assistants link their work with colleagues’ work?

Language assistants and school colleagues should discuss how the language assistant’s lessons fit into the relevant education curriculum in operation. Language assistants can ask for copies of the course books as these could help to develop linked topics. Preparation and communication between language assistants and key colleagues is vital.

School holiday dates

Language assistants should be informed of the school’s diary and be aware of all holidays and training days.

How can language assistants borrow equipment for their classes?

Language assistants should ask their mentor about the procedure for using a CD player, television, DVD, overhead projector, computer or interactive whiteboard for their lessons. These media will give the language assistant’s classes more variety. It may be useful for the mentor teacher to show the language assistant where to make photocopies, well in advance of classes.

What are the rules regarding discipline or aggressive behaviour in class?

Mentor teachers should explain to language assistants what the school policy is on disruptive or aggressive behaviour. This will ensure that any action the language assistant takes is understood by the pupils and supported by the school. If one child is very disruptive in the language assistant’s class, the usual teacher for that class should be able to advise and support the language assistant appropriately. Please remember that language assistants are members of the school staff and deserve the same status and respect as other teachers.

Relationships with pupils, use of the internet and personal safety

Language assistants should be made aware of important issues regarding child protection under the relevant country’s legislation. The mentor teacher or other relevant member of staff is strongly advised to inform language assistants of their responsibilities in this area. Each school has a designated teacher for child protection who should be able to provide language assistants with a copy of the relevant school policies. Further information may also be obtained from the appropriate government department. It is the local authority’s/school’s responsibility to explain that it is not appropriate for any reason at any time to touch a child.

Any complaint will be taken very seriously and language assistants must take care that they do not behave in a way that could be misinterpreted by pupils or staff. If any accusations were to be made against a language assistant, it could end in dismissal or even a court hearing. Should any such issue occur, please ensure the British Council is informed immediately.

We would ask schools to allow language assistants to use the internet as a source of up-to-date material for the classroom, for helping with school projects and similar. It is also helpful if language assistants can access information on the UK that will help them to make the most of their stay. Schools are asked to ensure that language assistants are aware of, and fully understand, the school’s policy on the use of computers, and particularly that they are aware of any restrictions on access to certain internet sites or on the content of emails sent from school computers. Language assistants must be told that it is a sackable offence to access pornographic and other unsuitable sites. They should also be given clear guidelines regarding the use of social-networking sites (for example, Facebook) and be advised against sharing personal contact details with pupils.

Both language assistants and host schools must be sensitive to cultural differences at all times and be aware that some types of behaviour may be seen as unusual, or inappropriate in a school context. Comments or gestures that are intended to be funny may cause offence and, exceptionally, may even be seen as threatening violence or constituting sexual harassment. If language assistants wish to select discussion topics with political, religious or sexual aspects, they must ask their mentor teacher for advice before introducing the material in the classroom. Similarly, language assistants must seek advice from teachers before involving pupils in communication with others on the internet. Some students may be of a similar age to the language assistant but please remember that language assistants are to be treated as a respected member of school staff.

England and Wales
Language assistants must be aware of the issues regarding child protection under The Children Act 1989 and should consult the Department for Education (DfE) website.

Northern Ireland
Language assistants must be aware of the issues regarding child protection under the Department of Education, Northern Ireland. It is known as the Children (NI) Order 1995.

Scotland
Language assistants must be aware of the issues regarding child protection under The Protection of Children (Scotland) Act 2003 and should consult the information on the Scottish government website on this subject.

Language assistants may be instantly dismissed from their post if they interact with pupils in any way that is seen as inappropriate. Such concerns should be raised with the British Council immediately.

What are the rules regarding sick leave?
The language assistant’s mentor teacher can explain what the school procedure is regarding absence in the case of illness and when a doctor’s certificate would be required. Language assistants must telephone their school to inform them as soon as possible if they are sick. If language assistants fall ill within the first 12 weeks of starting work, they will only be entitled to Statutory Sick Pay (currently £88.45 per week, though this may be subject to change). The amount is unlikely to cover the living costs of a language assistant. It is therefore expected that if a language assistant is ill for an extended period they will return home. If language assistants do not return to their home country because of illness, they may not be paid for this period. Language assistants should check any arrangements for sick pay with their school before returning home. If a language assistant has to return home for any reason during the year, they must inform their mentor teacher prior to their arrival in the UK. On arrival, they must show their mentor teacher the official request from their university. French language assistants may be able to take exams at the French Institute in London or Edinburgh and should enquire about this possibility before arranging to return home. Schools are asked to be sympathetic to reasonable requests by language assistants for time off to take examinations but language assistants should ensure that they are absent for as little time as possible, and they should offer to make up the hours they miss during their absence. If they work the same number of hours missed once they return, they should be paid the same as in a normal month where they are there all the time.

Teachers are always so busy but how can language assistants interact with them?
We encourage language assistants to stay in the staffroom occasionally when they have free periods between lessons as they may meet teachers of all subjects. Perhaps having lunch with staff members will also provide the opportunity for social chat. If language assistants have particular interests or would like to get involved in local activities, colleagues are encouraged to invite them to such events and try to find the time to talk to them as a new life in the UK may prove daunting and rather lonely at first. Often there are organised school trips to theatres and other towns in which language assistants could easily be included. Insurance for such trips must be looked into as language assistants may not be fully covered by the school’s insurance policy.

Should language assistants be given fixed timetables?
All language assistants must have a timetable for their classes. Most timetables are weekly but some may be for ten-day (i.e. two-week) periods. The language assistant’s timetable has to fit in with the rest of the school timetable, so although schools may try to arrange for the language assistant to have one free day during the working week, this cannot be guaranteed. Language assistants must receive a fixed timetable by their third week in school.

1.17 Induction meetings/ observing classes
Some local authorities arrange induction meetings for language assistants appointed to schools in their area. Language assistants will also be invited to meetings organised by their embassy or cultural institute alongside the British Council. Language assistants are strongly advised to attend as they will be given lots of useful information and will meet other assistants working in the area. If schools can permit the language assistant to take a day off work for such induction meetings, it would be most beneficial for all parties involved.
Observing classes

Before language assistants begin to work closely with pupils they should be given the opportunity to observe the class teacher. Observation will allow language assistants to experience classroom management techniques as well as to get to know the names, faces and personalities of their pupils.

We ask assistants to note the following:

- how the teacher starts and ends the lesson
- how much the target language is used
- what the teacher’s attitude is to pupil errors and error correction
- how the teacher controls behaviour, lateness and lack of effort
- how the teacher speaks to pupils
- how the teacher involves all pupils in the class activity.

1.18 The role of a language assistant

Depending on teachers and the age of the pupils, language assistants may be asked to:

- work with the teacher in the classroom
- work on their own with small groups of pupils
- help prepare pupils for oral examinations
- make recordings in their own language that the school can use as an example of native-speaker speech
- introduce and contribute to group discussions and role plays in their own language
- work on specific topics with small groups of older students
- contribute to cross-curricular work in collaboration with other subject areas
- help set up links with schools in their home country
- contribute to an international project.

Language teachers may wish to talk to language assistants in their own language for practice. MLAs should communicate in the target language during class time. Teachers should meet with the school’s language assistants on a regular basis in order to plan work. Feedback will be helpful to both language assistant, staff members and eventually to pupils.

 Experienced teachers can sometimes forget that language assistants need time to prepare a lesson and cannot do a good job if asked to cover a specific topic only a few minutes before going into the classroom. Please make sure regular communication and sufficient support is offered so that language assistants and teachers can develop a good working rapport.

Language assistants are not employed as teachers. They should not be asked to:

- take sole responsibility for whole classes
- supervise or discipline pupils regularly
- take responsibility for marking pupils’ work or exam papers
- give classes in a language other than their own.

In class, a good first impression will help and language assistants should try to establish themselves from the start as well-organised, professional and motivated people.

1.19 The role of the host school: how to make the best use of your language assistant

In order for your language assistant to feel welcome and settle in quickly, we would recommend that you:

- make your offer letter as comprehensive as possible: provide travel information, a what-to-bring list, local area and climate information and school prospectus
- remain in contact with your language assistant over the summer period
- meet your language assistant on day of arrival
- introduce your language assistant to relevant members of staff, MFL team and other colleagues (especially the younger ones or those with similar interests)
- upon arrival, ensure your language assistant’s tax code and National Insurance are set up
- pass on helpful information from previous assistants
- give your language assistant the same information you would give a student or probationer: school site plan and introduction to the relevant school system which is likely to be very different for them; this will include exam system and curriculum guidelines – you may want to use handbooks, websites, personal introductions and meetings
- remember language assistants often come from very different school cultures: some of which can be much more formal or informal than that of the UK. It may take time for them to understand the relationship between staff and pupils in the UK
- help with finding permanent accommodation if relevant
- help with signing up with a doctor and getting an NHS number
- support with understanding their role, status and discipline – language assistants are colleagues and should be treated as such
- ensure they understand issues surrounding child protection and have access to a copy of the school’s child protection policy
- make arrangements for lesson observation
- allow them to spend as much time in a learning environment as possible, especially in the first term, so that they understand how children learn language and how to use authentic materials/resources; your language assistant may not know much about the practicalities of language teaching and may need some guidance – when/if your language assistant teaches groups independently, ensure an appropriate room is available
- if possible, provide your language assistant with a display board
- make sure your language assistant has a fixed timetable by the third week – rolling timetables can give flexibility
- involve your language assistant in their department – staff meetings, parent evenings, etc.
- find out about their interests and how these can be put to good use in school (e.g. sport, music, drama, art)
- encourage involvement in interdisciplinary and out-of-school activities – music, drama, sport, trips, etc.
- appoint a mentor for regular support
- provide opportunity for contact with other language assistants in neighbouring schools: it would be helpful if you could give them the appropriate contact details
- EFL – mention Cambridge Proficiency or other courses
- the first few weekends are the most difficult ...try to arrange for the language assistant to be invited by younger members of staff to join outings (October break – should they really want to rush home?).

Language assistants need to know:
- what you, the teacher, expect of them in good time before each lesson
- about the pastoral system and discipline procedures your school might use – please ensure your language assistant is provided with a copy of the school’s grievance and disciplinary policy
- about the shape of the school year and exams (GCSE, National 4 and 5, A-level etc.)
- about teaching groupings/sets, etc.
- where to access services (for example, photocopies) and who to speak to about financial problems (for example, pay)
- where to find departmental resources – teachers’ books, supplementary books, flashcards, scissors, card, glue, OHTs, VCRs, DVDs, tape recorders, computer schemes of work, smart board or other classroom equipment, dice, etc.
- about useful sources of support: for example, www.britishcouncil.org/languageassistants
With regard to teaching, language assistants need to understand basic, essential concepts like:

- using authentic resources
- how to set up pair work
- information-gap exercises
- receptive versus productive language
- how to stay in the target language
- promoting discussion in the senior years (for example with Advanced Higher or A-Level students)
- fun ways of practising role plays and other creative activities
- the importance of games (including grammar games) and competitions
- the importance of pictures and sources – magazines, calendars, clip-art
- how to approach a new topic with higher classes without frightening them
- how to tackle a sophisticated text in which there is a lot of new vocabulary
- planning to go from familiar to unfamiliar and from easy to harder, and the need for planning (give a template format?).

The best way for language assistants to understand the above is for them to be in the classroom with the teacher and to see these concepts in practice. Team teaching, at least initially, is very valuable as it exposes the language assistant to the methodology and establishes their status as a member of the teaching staff. It also ensures regular, pre-planned and structured teaching, as well as authentic use of language.

1.20 Use of internet and social media

Language assistants are encouraged and expected to use the internet for professional purposes, and they can usually do so at school. However, they should check with their mentor when they can and cannot use the internet. Language assistants should try to use the internet for personal matters outside of school.

Language assistants should be very careful about how they use social networking sites (such as Facebook) while they are a language assistant on the programme. They should keep their profile private so that it can only be viewed by people they intend to view it. Language assistants must always remain professional in what they say on their profiles.

Language assistants should never swap personal contact details with pupils or invite them to be ‘friends’, or accept similar invitations from them, as this is likely to be regarded as inappropriate behaviour and could lead to disciplinary action. Advice from teachers regarding this would be very useful, especially if language assistants want to get pupils involved in online work, for example for projects.

Teaching in Northern Ireland

If language assistants are interested in training to become a teacher in Northern Ireland they can consult the following website.
Scotland

SCILT, Scotland’s National Centre for Languages
SCILT provides information on and promotes the learning and use of languages in Scotland. It also offers professional development and conducts research in support of language teachers and professionals.

SCILT works in partnership with the British Council in Scotland to support the professional development of language assistants, and encourages them to implement a project during their stay. You can sign up for their weekly news bulletin for information on languages and language learning in Scotland. SCILT also has responsibility for the Confucius Institute for Scotland’s Schools (CISS).

Teaching in Scotland
If language assistants are interested in training to become a teacher in Scotland, they can consult the following website.

Scottish Association for Language Teaching (SALT)
Once language assistants have arrived in the UK they may be invited by a SALT member in their area to a meeting with local teachers of modern foreign languages and other assistants. Assistants should go along to meet people and to find out how the association can be of benefit to them as well as their school. They hold a popular annual conference in early November. For more information please consult the following website.

Curriculum for Excellence
Curriculum for Excellence is a Scottish government initiative to ensure that all children and young people in Scotland develop the knowledge and skills they will need if they are to flourish in life, learning, and work, both now and in the future. By identifying and developing four main themes – to enable each child or young person to be a successful learner, a confident individual, a responsible citizen and an effective contributor – Curriculum for Excellence aims to improve the quality of learning and teaching and increase the attainment and achievement of all children and young people in Scotland, including those who need additional support in their learning.

Scotland China Education Network (SCEN)
SCEN is a group of individuals, national agencies, schools and associations keen to promote the teaching and learning of Chinese language and culture in Scottish schools. For more information, please visit this website.

Education Scotland
The national body supporting quality and improvement in Scottish education by:

- leading and supporting the implementation of Curriculum for Excellence
- increasing the capacity for self-evaluation and self-improvement among education providers and practitioners
- promoting high-quality professional learning and leadership
- identifying and stimulating innovation, sharing successful approaches widely with others
- providing independent external evaluations of the quality of educational provision at individual provider, local authority and partners, and national levels
- supporting the development and implementation of policy at national level. For more information visit the following website.
LIFE OUTSIDE WORK

1.22 Settling in
Even if language assistants have been to the UK before, it is possible that they will find some things strange at first and will need a little time to settle in. Language assistants should tell people if they are having any problems or if they need information, but mentor teachers and other colleagues in school should make sure they are approachable and willing to help where possible. Assistants should try to accept invitations to places and activities as much as possible as they might meet new friends and gain new interests.

1.23 Extra-curricular activities
The people language assistants meet in school initially will be members of the MFL department. By getting involved in other activities, language assistants will have the opportunity to meet other members of staff. Apart from their work in the classroom, assistants may be able to attend other classes in subjects that are of interest to them. Language assistants will become much more integrated into school life and gain considerably more from their stay if they become involved in activities organised by the school, for example, sports days, theatre or music productions or modern language societies. Language assistants should try to go to school ‘open days’ or parent evenings, as these are also a good way of meeting people.

Private study
Language assistants should have lots of time during the year for private study, as well as for preparing and giving lessons at school. They could investigate the possibility of doing a part-time course at their local college of further education (also a good way to meet people). If language assistants are interested in taking the Cambridge English: Proficiency exam, visit their website for further information. However, language assistants must remember that their school work, timetable and role as a British Council language assistant must take priority. Language assistants must not arrange any classes for personal study until they have a fixed timetable at their school(s).

1.24 Some (more) useful tips for language assistants
- Smoking is banned in all public places in all parts of the UK. This usually includes the area immediately outside school buildings.
- It is illegal to carry a CS gas canister in the UK, even for personal protection. CS gas is a riot-control agent used by police and is classified legally as an offensive weapon. The maximum penalty on indictment is four years’ imprisonment or a fine, or both.

Child protection laws in the UK are very strict, and may also apply to situations outside of the classroom, for example on school buses or at private parties.
- Although language assistants can be polite and friendly if they see students outside of school, they should remember to remain professional at all times and not put themselves in any situations that could be misconstrued.
-Inviting your students to join blogs or online discussions is likely to lead to an offence against child protection regulations. Consult your colleagues before doing so.

1.25 Travel
If language assistants intend to do a lot of travelling, they should ask in their own country if there are any cheap tickets or passes for UK travel which are available to buy there but not in the UK.

Coach (long-distance bus) travel is cheaper than rail but language assistants can get cheaper rail tickets by booking in advance.

Rail travel is usually more expensive at peak times from Monday to Friday, but some language assistants are entitled to a 16–25 railcard. These cost £30 and save a third off train travel. For more information, please visit the website to get more information or to buy a card online. Language assistants from a non-EU country who are considering travel to other European countries at Christmas or Easter should apply for a Schengen visa, which allows travel to 15 European countries on a single visa. There is more information available here.

1.26 Saving money
Language assistants who are students in their home country should look into getting an International Student Identity Card (ISIC) before coming to the UK. With this card you are eligible for discounts in shops, restaurants and tourist attractions among other things. Additionally, language assistants should ask at their school if there are ‘cheap days’ for activities in their area; for example, cinemas are often cheaper on Wednesdays. A number of shops and supermarket chains offer loyalty cards which may prove useful.

Information about Income Tax and double taxation agreements

<tr>
<th>(A) If language assistants are from</th>
<th>Language assistants may not have to pay Income Tax in the UK on their allowance because there is a double taxation agreement, with an article for teachers, between their country and the UK (in the UK language assistants are considered as teachers for payment purposes). Please note, language assistants may still be eligible to pay tax in their home country. A list of agreements can be found on the HM Revenue and Customs website. Find the relevant country in the list and then the article relating to teachers. This agreement lasts only for two years (for three with China). If language assistants do any teaching work in the UK after this time, they will start paying tax and will also have to pay the tax back for their first two years. In addition, if they have worked in the UK before, or if they have been living outside their home country for a long time, they may have to pay Income Tax anyway.</th>

| (B) If language assistants are from a country not listed in point A above and do not work in the London area | They may have to pay Income Tax because no double taxation agreement (with Teachers’ Article) exists. Your Revenue and Customs office should calculate the correct amount for language assistants to pay each month allowing for the fact that they start work halfway through the tax year. However, sometimes Income Tax may be deducted so they should contact them to claim this back. |

| (C) If language assistants are from a country not listed in point A above and do work in the London area | They will have to pay a small amount of Income Tax because the London supplement takes them over the ‘no tax’ threshold. However, they pay tax only on the amount they earn in excess of the ‘no tax’ threshold. |

| (D) All language assistants | Language assistants may be subject to tax (emergency tax) in the first month or two as it takes time for their Income Tax form, P46, to be processed. They should automatically receive a refund with their next salary (usually in December). |

What you have to do regarding Income Tax

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>On arrival</th>
<th>All language assistants must fill out New Starters Checklist and ask their employer to fill out their section on the same form. This is the form employers need when recruiting a new employee who has not worked in the UK recently. The P46, when completed, must be sent to the employer’s tax office (schools or local authorities as appropriate).</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>On arrival</td>
<td>If the language assistant’s country has a double taxation agreement (with Teachers’ Article) with the UK – a covering letter and a printout of the relevant Teaching Article must be attached to the completed tax form. Otherwise, the language assistant may be taxed</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>January</td>
<td>If the language assistant’s country has a double taxation agreement (with Teachers’ Article) with the UK – and if they are still paying tax, they should contact HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) office to ask if the figures are correct. If they have made a mistake, the language assistant should get the money back with their next payslip.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>April/May</td>
<td>For language assistants who pay Income Tax in the new tax year (from April onwards) – since they will normally work for only two months of the new tax year, they should be able to claim back the tax. Language assistants need to fill out the Income Tax form P85 just before they leave the UK. As they will no doubt leave the UK before they receive the money, language assistants must keep their bank account open and when the tax refund arrives in their account, they should make arrangements to transfer it to their bank account in their home country.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
Income Tax is specific to each person, so each language assistant must find out what applies to their personal situation. If language assistants do non-teaching work, they would normally have to pay tax on it. If language assistants have a question about their own Income Tax situation, they should contact HMRC: details are available from school or online – sometimes the nearest office is not the one used by the assistant’s school.

Possible questions relating to Income Tax – for the language assistant

1. I think I have paid too much tax – what should I do? It takes time for forms to be processed, so you may be paying emergency tax (which is a high rate). Don’t worry: you should get the money back with your next salary or by December at the latest. The HMRC will only deal with you personally regarding queries.

2. There is a double taxation agreement with my home country but I’m still paying tax. What should I do? There are agreements with some countries that do not include teaching work. In this case you will have to pay Income Tax.

3. My school can’t help me with my Income Tax problems. What should I do? Income Tax is very complicated and your situation is different from that of normal teaching staff as you are not from the UK and are working at the school for only a few months. It is better to contact HMRC to check your situation.

4. I haven’t been paying Income Tax on my salary but I have worked in a bar/restaurant and paid tax on that salary. Can I get it back? Possibly. It depends on how much you earned. Before you go home, fill out form P85, send it to your Revenue and Customs office and they will investigate.

5. I’m going back home soon and I’m worried I won’t get my tax back before I go. Make sure you fill out form P85 before you leave. Revenue and Customs will not send you the money in your local currency, so you will either have to cash a cheque at home or keep your UK bank account open so that the money can be paid into it after you leave. You can then transfer the funds into your bank account at home.

6. I’ve tried everything, but I’m certain I’m paying too much tax. There is a procedure for making a complaint to the Revenue and Customs office. Information on this can be found on the website here.

Please do not call the British Council with regard to Income Tax enquiries, as we cannot give advice on how your personal circumstances will affect your tax.

Appendix II: Clarification of terms

There is sometimes confusion over terminology. The following is intended to clarify.

■ British Council language assistants are not classroom assistants. These are two completely different roles with different terms and conditions, but unfortunately the terms are often used interchangeably.

■ Classroom assistants (generally) have permanent contracts while language assistants always have temporary contracts. Language assistants are in the UK as part of an international exchange programme; their contract is for eight, nine or a maximum of ten months and they are not paid during the summer holidays. The few who stay in the UK for a second year are simply starting a second temporary contract.

■ Language assistants should not be used as teachers or teaching assistants.
