Spatial Cognition and Computation An Interdisciplinary Journal

Impact Factor: 0.464
Ranking: 78/81 (Psychology, Experimental)

Editors: Anthony G. Cohn, University of Leeds, UK
Daniel R. Montello, University of California at Santa Barbara, USA

Volume 13, 2012, 4 issues per year

This multidisciplinary journal is based on the assumption that the critical issues pertaining to spatial cognition and computation lie at the intersection of a number of disciplines, in particular: cognitive psychology, computer science, geography, neuropsychology, and artificial intelligence. Recent years have seen a growth in this desire of these communities to share insights and results. The aim of the journal is to concentrate the presentation of research into spatial cognition and computation, and to explicitly foster an interdisciplinary dialogue.
