Other Employer Responsibilities

- Withhold income for the employee’s obligations according to the notice of Income Withholding for Support and withhold for the child(ren)’s health insurance premiums according to the National Medical Support Notice (NMSN)
- Remit income withheld for the employee’s obligations and child(ren)’s health insurance premiums
- Report terminated employees to the agency that issued the income withholding order if an income withholding order has been issued
- Respond to a National Medical Support Notice (NSMN)

How Employers Partner for Support

- Securing support for children by withholding employee income for child support and medical support obligations as well as providing and withholding for health care insurance. More than 70% of child support collections sent to families comes from income withholding.
- Responding to the NMSN and providing medical insurance for children. The NMSN is sent to employers from the state child support enforcement agency to ensure that children receive health care coverage as required as part of a child support order, when it is available and at a reasonable cost.
- Preventing and reducing fraud. State agencies use new hire employment information to reduce overpayments in areas of public assistance, unemployment insurance, disability insurance, and workers’ compensation benefits.
- Saving taxpayers’ dollars. Child support collections reimburse public assistance spending and reduce government costs.

What is new hire reporting?
Federal law (42 United States Code[USC] 653a) requires employers to report information about newly hired and rehired employee’s to a state directory within 20 days of hire (rehire). This information is matched with state and national data to help collect child support through income withholding and reduce fraudulent unemployment and workers’ compensation payments. A newly hired employee is an individual not previously employed by your company, and a rehired employee is an individual who was previously employed by your company but separated from employment for at least 60 consecutive days.

Why is new hire reporting important?
- It helps children receive the support they need and deserve.
- It assists the State in locating parents who owe child support and identifying recipients of public assistance and unemployment compensation who fail to report earnings.
- It reduces fraudulent unemployment insurance and workers’ compensation claims.
- Overall, new hire reporting is a vital and easy process designed to help employers make a positive difference in their communities.

Who must report new hires?
All public, private, non-profit, and state government employers with employees working in Michigan are required to report newly hired and rehired employees to the Michigan New Hires Operation Center. Refer to “Multistate Employers” for the exception. Some payroll processing services automatically report new hires. However, as an employer you must verify that reporting is being done on your behalf; if it is not, you must report new hires directly. If you are unsure whether or not an individual is an “employee,” refer to the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) web site, www.irs.gov, or contact the IRS at 800-829-1040.

When must new hires be reported?
Employers must report newly hired or rehired employees within 20 days of the employee’s date of hire or rehire which is the first date the employee performs services for pay. Employers who report electronically (or magnetically) must submit two transmissions each month (if necessary based on volume of hiring) not fewer than 12 days nor more than 16 days apart. Reporting new hires online is considered electronic reporting.
