Online and Blended Learning at UNT: Online courses are regular university courses in which a majority of the classroom instruction is replaced with instruction in a Web-based learning environment. In an online course, you login to a virtual classroom (http://learn.unt.edu) to complete lessons and other activities your instructor has developed. Communications with your instructor and classmates take place using a combination of email, text-based discussion forums, and live text or voice-based chats. Assessments and assignments are also generally completed and submitted in the virtual classroom. Not all online courses take place 100% in the online environment. Some courses blend online instruction and activities with on-campus class meetings. Most online courses follow the academic calendar (beginning and ending with the semester). The accelerated online master’s courses, however, allow you to progress at your own pace with flexible 8-week courses with 5 available start dates. http://www.unt.edu/onlinemasters/
