COON HILL CEMETERY
CELEBRATION OF THE HISTORIC SITE RESTORATION
October 28, 2007

Coon Hill is the oldest cemetery in northern Santa Rosa County. It originated around 1820, about the time of the first settlers. The close-in quarters of the Coon Hill community was located about 1/4 mile away, near a big spring and fresh water. It had a general merchandise store, stable, blacksmith shop, Pony Express Station, U.S. Post Office and a Church that alternated between Methodist and Baptist.

The concrete wall was poured about 100 years ago. The sand and gravel used in construction of the wall was hauled from Diamond Creek, approximately ¾ of a mile, using slip scoops pulled by mules.

Prominent people buried at Coon Hill include: 2 Senators, 2 Circuit riding Preachers, 15 Civil War Veterans, 2 Tax Assessors, 3 Postmasters, and many other prominent people. Ancestral names of Byrnes, Campbell, Davis, Diamond, Enfinger, Ezell, Hart, Howell, Lee, Magaha, Mayo, McCaskill, McDavid, McKinnon, McMillan, Miner, Pearson, Penton, Pyburn, Reynolds, Rutherford, Salter, Savell, Severson, Slade, Williams, and others are buried here.

We have had three major desecrations over the last 12 years that were devastating. About 150 headstones and slabs have been badly broken. The big unbreakable ones have been pushed over, sometimes breaking the slab as they fell. The landmark statue of Mary, "The Mother of Jesus" was broken beyond repair and has been replaced. We also have installed three wrought iron gates in the concrete wall openings with the name "COON HILL" above the Entrance gate. About 100 headstones and slabs and 73 new markers have been replaced or repaired. We are proud of this Historic cemetery and sometime in the future there may be a need to open a new section for burials.

In the year 2007, about the only thing Coon Hill is known for is an almost abandoned cemetery in the middle of nowhere - a cemetery where teenagers pull pranks on other teens, where paranormal investigators run experiments, and all too often, where vandals destroy the remaining headstones of some of the pioneers to the Northwest Florida and Southwest Alabama area.

Nearly 200 years ago, as the United States was in its infancy, people began to slowly migrate to this region. The towns of Century and Flomaton did not become bustling communities until the beginning of the 1900’s. But, according to the book Santa Rosa Cemeteries, it is believed that people buried at Coon Hill “represent the original founders of this area, mostly of Scottish descent.”

The original Coon Hill area, though now located in a desolate area in the middle of timberland and hunting clubs, was a real community, with real people, who came to this unsettled area to make a home.

The community, which lies on the edge of the Escambia River on what is now Santa Rosa County, was connected to the Escambia County side of the river by ferry and by an old wooden bridge. Both the bridge and the ferry have long been gone.

Some family members eventually moved to the Escambia side, while others stayed in Santa Rosa County. The cemetery at Ray’s Chapel Baptist Church in Bogia, on the Escambia County side of the river, is home to many of the brothers and sisters to those settlers buried at Coon Hill.

In the 1800s and early 1900s Coon Hill was a small logging community, even before Florida became a state. Timber Explorer E.F. Skinner operated in the area from 1874 to 1908. The town had a post office, hotel, church and many homes. One resident, Edward Campbell, was born in Scotland in 1757. He originally settled in Marion County, South Carolina. Following the death of his wife, Mary McClellan, he moved to Escambia County, Fla., which was ruled by Spain. Edward Campbell was one of the petitioners who in 1821 appealed to Congress to settle land claims.

Most of the people who lived in the area are also buried there. Although the deed is 20 acres, only 1 or 2 acres is fenced in by a concrete wall.

Most graves at Coon Hill Cemetery range from 1836 to the early 1900s. Only a few people have been buried in the cemetery since the 1960s.

The list of names of those people there reads like a Who’s Who in area history. The cemetery has two senators, E.V. McCaskill and Neill McMillan; a circuit rider Methodist minister, Sharrod Lewis Hart; a tax assessor and tax collector, Charles Edward Campbell, who also served in the Florida Militia during the Civil War.

Another resident of Coon Hill and one-time postmaster was William Larkin Williams, the man for whom Williams’ Station (now Atmore) was named. The oldest grave in the cemetery is that of his first wife, Margaret McMillan Williams, who died March 19, 1836. His second wife, Mary McMillan Williams (sister to his first wife - both daughters of Duncan McMillan and Mary ‘Polly’ Wilkinson McMillan) are also buried at Coon Hill, plus many of Williams’ children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Florida became a state in 1845. Margaret McMillan Williams’ grave and the town are dated prior to Florida’s statehood during the time of Spanish rule. In fact, her grave is recorded as having the oldest headstone in Santa Rosa County.

One of those children was Wiley Q. Williams, who was appointed second postmaster in 1854. After this the post office was moved to Chumuckla Springs where water supposedly flowed from the legendary Fountain of Youth sought by the Spanish Conquistador, Ponce de Leon.

Miss Mary E. Williams, daughter of Wiley J. and Margaret McDavid Williams who died Sept. 27, 1877, of typhoid fever, when she was only 17 years old, is buried at Coon Hill. Sabra Williams (daughter of William Larkin Williams and Margaret McMillan) along with her husband Joel Alexander McDavid, are buried in Coon Hill. Joel’s parents, Richmond Terrell McDavid and Sarah McCaskill, lived in Coon Hill and are buried there.

Sabra and Joel and their children, Margaret, Clementine, Albert, Beauregard, David, Mamie, Ida, Fannie, Wiley, Allie and Walter, all lived in Coon Hill. Many of their descendants still live in the Jay and Century areas.

Descendants from these early pioneers still live and prosper in the south Alabama, northwest Florida area. Some of the surnames of those descendants include: Miller, Lambert, Crumbley, Slade, Severson, Brooks, McCaskill, Harrison, McDavid, McArthur, Stanton, Davis, Holland, McMillan, McDaniel, Byrne, Savell, Reynolds, Wilkins, Penton, Griffin, Magaha, Jenkins, Smiley, Wilkinson, McKinnon, Campbell, Ezell, Hart, Mims, Diamond,

Even though the Coon Hill area is no more than an echo from the past, it is one of the roots to the area’s foundation. It is where our ancestors carved out a place to work and to live, to make a home and build a new state.

Many of those in the photograph lived in the Coon Hill area and are buried in the cemetery there. These residents now have descendants living not only in this region but across the country.

How “Williams Station” was Named
Excerpt from the Tri-City Ledger
August 12, 1999
By Anne Anderson

William Larkin Williams, known as “Uncle Bud,” was born February 18, 1807 in Bullock County, Georgia and moved to Escambia County, Florida in 1819. He died July 8, 1900, in McDavid, Florida, at the age of 93 years, 4 months and 20 days. He is buried in Coon Hill Cemetery in Santa Rosa County, Florida, near Chumuckla Springs.

On either side of his are buried two of his three wives, Margaret and Mary McMillan, both daughters of Mary [Polly] Wilkinson McMillan and Duncan McMillan. He married Margaret McMillan on March 5, 1829, in Santa Rosa County, Florida. After Margaret died, he married her sister Mary.

Upon Mary’s death, June 28, 1887, Williams married [third] Fannie Bellah on May 4, 1889. She was born February 8, 1846. A little math shows he was 82 years old and Fannie was 42.

When Williams moved to Escambia County, Florida, to live at a place known in recent years as Reuben Herman Place in Walnut Hill, 2 ½ miles west of McDavid Station. Williams would ride his pony from Walnut Hill to the railroad [to the north], presumably to get supplies, tie the pony to a tree and then flag down the train [to go to Mobile or Montgomery]. He’d catch the next train back.

This particular tree became know as “Williams Station,” and its locality is now known as Atmore, Alabama. Family folklore states that he eventually build a little shelter to house his horse while he was gone, but no one knows for sure.

http://www.escohis.org/Photo_History.html

The first structure in what is Atmore was a small shed built along the railroad at which supplies were left for William Larkin Williams who had a logging operation ten miles down in Florida. In 1866 the site was first called Williams Station, just a supply stop along the railroad.

By the 1870's there were several buildings; a railroad station, a store containing the post office, and one dwelling. Late in 1870 the first sawmill was put into operation.

In 1897 the name was changed to Atmore in honor of C.P. Atmore, the local General Ticket Agent on the Louisville Nashville Railroad.

In about 1820 settlers concentrated in an area alongside a creek with fresh water flowing from both sides, later named Diamond Creek. Coon Hill was chosen by a vote of the early pioneers over Opossum Hill. This was the first town in the area now known as northwest Santa Rosa County.

In 1838, President Andrew Jackson’s army gathered the Indians and marched them to Oklahoma to be settled on a Reservation. The early pioneers now felt safe to move further out, but Coon Hill was still the headquarters to receive mail and to purchase equipment and supplies and other essentials of life. The post office was located there about 1845.

The Post Office was moved to Chumuckla around 1900 and located in a small building across the dirt road from the old cotton gin. The mail was still delivered by Pony Express. At about the same time, the last house in the Coon Hill Community was torn down and reassembled by the movers as they now began settling from the Alabama State line to the Wallace Community. The last building standing was the Methodist-Baptist Church which was later torn down and the lumber used to build the first parsonage at Elizabeth Chapel Church. All that remains of the Coon Community is the cemetery.

Buried in the cemetery are:

First Postmaster at Coon Hill: William Larkin Williams
Second Postmaster: William Larkin [Son of the first postmaster]
Third Postmaster: E. C. Severson
Neill C McMillan: elected to the Florida Senate in 1845, the year that Florida became a state.
Edward McCaskill: elected as a State Representative and later as a State Senator.
Two Santa Rosa County Tax Assessors:
   William Larkin Williams & Charles Edward Campbell
Two Circuit Riding Preachers:
   • Rev. Sharrod L Hart –1823-1859
   • Rev. Robert Smilie -1827-1906
Fifteen Civil War Veterans: Campbell, Diamond, Mayo, McCaskill, and McMillan.

The oldest marker is dated 1836.

There were many early grave markers made of Heart Pine Boards. They are all gone, some were mapped and recorded and replaced and others were not. After the settlers moved out a wall was needed to protect the cemetery from fire and wildlife. The concrete wall was constructed about 1895-1900 with sand and gravel moved by slip-scoops pulled by mules from nearby Diamond Creek. The cement was supplied by William J Williams Hardware Store in Milton.

The cemetery was vandalized in: May 2000, May 2003 & December 2006. We are thankful to those who have made contributions of money and hard work to restore it to the current condition.

We thank you for taking the opportunity to visit this Historic Place and enjoying a meal with us.

I hope you enjoy the day,

Alvin H Enfinger, Trustee

In the Tri-City Ledger, Jan. 4, 2007, Anne Stanton Williamson did a full page coverage on Coon Hill. One interesting fact she mentioned in her article follows:

"Florida became a state in 1845. Margaret McMillan Williams' grave and the town are dated prior to Florida's statehood, during the time of Spanish rule. In fact, her grave is recorded as having the oldest headstone in Santa Rosa County."

Coon Hill was once thriving

This week I will conclude the information on the McDavid family (at least I think I will). I have one more source to go to before I quit and, if I find anything more, I will continue for another week.

I am still with the children of Richmond Terrell McDavid and Sarah McCaskill.

Daniel F. McDavid (26 April 1848-26 Feb. 1909) married 31 Dec. 1872, Addie Davis (24 Nov. 1851-21 May 1923. They are buried at Coon Hill Cemetery and they had Ula McDavid (8 May 1876-4 Aug. 1907) who married Riley Stanton; Roland L. McDavid who married Eva Suggs; and Byron McDavid (1888-1922) who married Florence Fillingim.

Mary Elizabeth McDavid (26 April 1848-14 March 1880), daughter of Richmond Terrell McDavid, married on 12 Dec. 1867 to Allen Marion McMillan (28 March 1843-31 May 1896), son of Malcolm McMillan and Mary McCaskill. They are buried at Coon Hill Cemetery and they had Dr. Daniel Walter McMillan (13 Jan. 1869-4 Aug. 1936) who married in 1929, Florence Rose. D.W. McMillan Memorial Hospital is named for him and he is buried in Birmingham in Jefferson County.

I was thinking when I started this that another James McMillan was the one mentioned above, but I realized that was not the case. I found a good write-up about one James McMillan, the son of Malcolm McMillan and Mary Jane McCaskill.

Most of us know the story of Edward Sylvester McMillan who was gunned down by Railroad Bill in 1806. He was the sheriff of Escambia County, Ala., at the time of his death, but there was another Sheriff McMillan who served Escambia County, Fla.

This is part of what is found in the Escambia County Archives Biographies. Additional Comments: “Memorial Record of Alabama”, Vol. I, p. 984-986; Brant & Fuller (1893) Madison, Wis.

James McMillan, whose name appears at the head of this sketch, was born in Santa Rosa County, Fla., April 30, 1847, and received a limited education in the schools of his native town. Not old enough to enter the regular service at the breaking out of the Civil War, he nevertheless became greatly interested in the Southern cause, and for some years served in the state militia without taking part in any actual battles.
He remained under the parental roof until attaining his majority, and later entered the employ of his brother, Allen M. McMillan, who carried on the mercantile business at Pollard, Ala., for whom he clerked several years, and was also employed, in a similar capacity, with W. M. Carney, at Williams' Station.

In 1878, he removed to Brewton, and engaged in the general mercantile trade, which he carried on with varying success until 1885, at which time he disposed of his business, and the year following was appointed sheriff of Escambia County, to serve out an unfinished term, caused by the resignation of T. F. Owens.

He discharged the duties of sheriff in a manner so acceptable to the people that at the ensuing election he was chosen his own successor, and is now the incumbent of the office. “Jim” McMillan, as he is familiarly called, is one of the most efficient sheriffs Escambia County has ever had, and his name has become a terror to all law breakers in Escambia and adjoining counties.

On taking the office, there were on file a number of dead warrants against parties whom his predecessors had feared to arrest, but nothing daunted ‘Jim.’ He immediately set about to bring these lawbreakers to justice or drive them out of the county, which he succeeded in doing so effectually that none of them have been heard of in the county since. He has the reputation of being bold, and absolutely fearless in the discharge of his official duties, but, withal, is a man of fine feeling, and always tries to make better men out of the prisoners placed in his charge.

Politically, Mr. McMillan has always been an active member of the Democratic Party, and as such takes an interest in the deliberations of such in Escambia County. He is a member of the Masonic and the K. of P. fraternities, in both of which orders he has held important official positions, and with his wife, belongs to the Methodist Episcopal Church, being a steward and Sunday School superintendent in the Brewton congregation.

He was united in marriage June 22, 1873, at Pollard, to Anne, daughter of W. S. Penn, whose family are Alabama people.”
