Progression Pathways with Edexcel

Edexcel qualifications provide learners with a structured but also flexible pathway, allowing you to choose a direction that’s right for you at every stage in your education and working life. This diagram shows the different learning tracks that you can take and how they lead on to further study and employment. Which track will you take?

Where can Edexcel qualifications take you?

In the following sections you’ll find some of the many universities, colleges, companies, industry associations and professional bodies around the world that recognise Edexcel qualifications. These organisations welcome applications from students who have achieved Edexcel qualifications gained in the UK or other countries. In some cases students with good grades in specific Edexcel qualifications, for example Edexcel BTEC HND/ICs, may enjoy credit or exemptions from part of a degree programme, or be eligible for membership of a relevant professional body.

Edexcel’s GCE A levels are accepted for entry purposes by all universities in the UK. In addition, universities in many countries, including the USA, Canada, South Africa and New Zealand have confirmed that they will accept applications from students with Edexcel GCE A levels. These include some of the world’s top institutions, such as the University of Yale and the University of Sydney.

Of course, each organisation has its own requirements and will look at applications on an individual basis, so we’ve given you some links to help you find out more. The following lists are current at the time of publication. Our recognition and progression pathways are constantly being updated as more and more universities and organisations choose to work with us. Please keep checking for updated lists at www.edexcel.com/international/progression.

“...We found Edexcel to be proactive because they wanted to shape a BTEC for us in conjunction with Exeter College. Flybe needed a programme that developed not only the practical skills, but also the brainpower to be able to say an aircraft is fit to fly. People will come out of this programme with a £31,000 a-year job guaranteed as a licensed aircraft engineer."

Simon Witts, Director of Safety, Quality and Training, Flybe
