About Speech-Language Pathologists and Audiologists

The ability to speak and hear is the basic essence of communication for mankind. Communication skills are in great demand in this millennium, be it through verbal, written or electronic media. Communication, which is acquired early in life, is the means by which human beings gain personal, social, emotional as well as professional satisfaction. Verbal communication is considered the most effective mode of communication. These skills develop and get refined with age. There are certain conditions which lead to disorders of communication. Speech-Language Pathologists and Audiologists handle these disorders along with other professionals. They have a significant role to alleviate and manage the impact of communication disorders.

Individuals having a variety of communication disorders are generally managed by Speech-Language Pathologists and Audiologists. These disorders include voice disorders, phonological disorders, fluency disorders, learning disability, dysarthria, hearing impairment, central auditory processing disorders, aphasia and other language disorders, and speech and language disorder due to mental retardation, cerebral palsy, autism spectrum disorders, neurological disorders in children and adults and similar other conditions that affect communication skills in individuals. Speech-Language Pathologists and Audiologists offer services to persons with communication disorder in a variety of setups such as hospitals, specialized institutions and schools, teaching, and research organizations.

Trainees at AIISH study the core subjects of Speech-Language Pathology and Audiology in depth. They also study allied subjects such as Clinical Psychology, Linguistics, Electronics, ENT and other medical subjects related to speech and hearing. As a part of their clinical course work, they are guided to screen, identify and diagnose communication disorders in different age groups, ranging from new born babies to senior citizens. In order to do this, they are trained to use state-of-the-art techniques and subsequently offer management strategies and make appropriate referrals. In addition, they are taught to conduct research and document information for future reference. Opportunity and guidance are also provided to the students to participate in professional workshops, seminars and conferences in order to enhance their knowledge-base and to stimulate the young minds for research.

Those with a Bachelor of Science in Speech and Hearing [B.Sc.(Sp. &Hg.)] / Bachelor of Audiology and Speech Language Pathology (BASLP), M.Sc. (Aud) and M.Sc. (SLP), who are registered with the Rehabilitation Council of India, are considered as full-fledged professionals. They are licensed to do private practice on their own. About Special Educators in the area of Hearing Impairment

Hearing impairment is a hidden disability. Children with hearing impairment have speech-language delays, social, educational and psychological problems. They pose a variety of challenges to the general classroom teacher. These children need special help to receive adequate education. Hence, teachers in a regular educational setup have to be equipped with adequate skills to meet their special instructional needs. Teachers must also understand the use of advanced equipment to facilitate learning benefits and to understand the psychosocial aspects of the disability.

A diploma programme in early childhood special education (hearing impairment) is being offered for the purpose of capacity building in the team for rehabilitation of young children with hearing impairment during their early stages of development. The focus of this diploma programme is on teaching methods to help pre-school children with hearing impairment for pre-scholastic and communication skills. In the Bachelor’s programme, Bachelor of Special Education (Hearing Impairment) [B.S.Ed(HI)], the student-teacher studies the core educational courses which provide basic information on the nature and needs of different disabilities, the psychological aspects of disabilities and trends in special education. The Master’s programme, Masters of Special Education (Hearing Impairment) [M.S.Ed. (HI)], has core courses for a strong base of teaching pedagogy along with specialization papers in the area of hearing impairment in addition to the input from the Bachelor’s programme. All the three programmes have intensive practical training.

The programmes offered in special education create a lot of professional opportunities for successful candidates. They can work in preparatory schools or can work as resource persons for children with hearing impairment and their caregivers. They will be eligible to work in both mainstream and special education setups. Besides this, they can also work as administrators in governmental and non-governmental educational programmes or become planners or policy makers who can make or change the special educational scenario in our society / country. Candidates with a proactive inclination can become researchers who pioneer developments in the field of education for both children with and without disabilities.

The Rehabilitation Council of India (RCI) registers candidates with a Diploma, Bachelor’s and Master’s programme as full-fledged personnel / professionals in the area of special education for children with hearing impairment.
