INDUSTRY ASSOCIATIONS RELEASE PROVIDER-DISTRIBUTOR PRINCIPLES ON RETAIL STRUCTURED PRODUCTS

Five leading trade associations are today jointly releasing a set of non-binding principles relating to retail structured products (the ‘RSP Principles’). They focus particularly on the management of the relationship between providers and distributors, from the perspectives of firms performing either function.

The Principles seek to address issues that financial services firms have in practice found helpful to consider when performing these roles in connection with the process of delivering structured products to retail investors. They are intended to be sufficiently broad in their applicability to provide a reference framework for retail structured products markets globally.

The Principles are the product of a working group of firms, taking in the views of both distributors and providers and supported by a coalition of trade associations: European Securitisation Forum (ESF), International Capital Market Association (ICMA), International Swaps and Derivatives Association (ISDA), London Investment Banking Association (LIBA) and Securities Industry and Financial Markets Association (SIFMA). The associations initially issued the Principles for public comment on April 19 and are today publishing them in final form.

Structured products include a variety of financial instruments that combine various cash assets and/or derivatives to provide a particular risk-reward profile that would not otherwise be available in the market. The exact risk-reward profile varies from instrument to instrument.

The Chairman of the joint-associations Working Group, Timothy Hailes (Managing Director and Associate General Counsel at JP Morgan Chase in London) noted: “These Principles have arisen from the practical experiences of firms active in this growing product area, and will also be of great value in dialogue with regulators around the world.”

The Principles are available on the Associations’ web-sites:
