Launched in 2010, ACOEM’s Guidance for the Medical Evaluation of Law Enforcement Officers is the first and only national consensus guidance for developing a comprehensive occupational health and safety program for police officers. The diverse Task Group (physicians, police officers and executives, and municipal managers), also seeks input from content experts and advocacy groups that relate to topic areas.

These collaborations have produced state-of-the-art chapters on diabetes, vision, hearing, cardiovascular issues, infectious diseases, medications, pregnancy, amputations/prosthetics, initial evaluation, neurology/seizures, sleep disorders, and substance use, with others to follow in this constantly evolving document – musculoskeletal, psychiatric/mental health, pulmonary and more along with periodic updates to each.

ACOEM’s on-line subscription-based resource, provides those treating LEOs with the information needed to make medical qualification recommendations that promote officers’ health and safety while at the same time ensuring their ability to protect civilians.

This on-line guidance is not only a valuable tool for PHYSICIAN use in determining LEO medical fitness, but is also a valuable resource for other law enforcement-related groups –

- public safety personnel
- members of national & international associations representing law enforcement
- law enforcement executives
- municipal managers, attorneys and insurers

It covers topics such as essential job functions, physical requirements for applicants, fitness-for-duty criteria for incumbents, surveillance issues and wellness and health maintenance topics, and helps to provide more medically sound rational uniformity to the decision-making process regarding the impact of various medical conditions on the ability to perform as a law enforcement officer.
