Tulsa fielded its first football team in 1895 as Henry Kendall College. The squad played one game that year, defeating the Bacone Indians in a home game played at Muskogee. The 2012 season is the 112th year that Tulsa has fielded a football team.
1895: The Legacy Begins

The legacy of Tulsa football began when the Bacone School for Indians and Henry Kendall College, which later became The University of Tulsa, did battle in 1895. It was one of the first football games in the Indian Territory and the game caused a lot of excitement within the student bodies of each school as well as the citizens of the Territory.

People in the Oklahoma Territory were excited by the prospects of having football in the area, but no one really understood how the game was played. The Kendall team didn’t even actually have a coach in that first season. A young transfer student from Springfield, Missouri, named Norman Leard stepped up to the task.

Although there was no score recorded, Kendall College won the only game the team played that year.

Football struggled to gain its prominence at the college. The college played only 19 games between 1900 and 1910. No teams were fielded in 1903, 1904, 1906, 1907 or 1911.

Kendall College’s reappearance on the collegiate football scene in 1912 came at a time when the game itself was becoming modernized. New rules altered the game. Offenses were allowed four downs to make 10 yards. The length of the playing field was reduced from 110 to 100 yards, and most importantly, the 20-yard limit on forward passes was removed.

By 1914, the resurrection of Kendall College football was in full swing and two men helped spur that along. Sam McBirney, a Tulsa banker, and Francis Schmidt came on the scene. In 1914, McBirney led the team to a 7-2 record with five shutout victories, and followed that season with a 6-1-1 record in 1915.

It wasn’t just McBirney who jump-started the football program. Ivan Grove, who was one player instrumental in building the the Kendall football program, was the key to undefeated seasons of 1916 and 1919. He quarterbacked the Presbyterians from 1914 through 1916, and again in 1919.

During the 1916 season, Grove and receivers Virgil Jones and Madison “Puny” Blevins developed the controversial “tower play”. The play called for Jones and Blevins to sprint down field, Blevins would stop, lift Jones onto his shoulders, and Grove would toss the ball to Jones. At that time, there were no rules against such a play. But it only worked once for the Kendallites in a 117-0 thrashing of Missouri School of Mines.

That was the type of domination Kendall experienced in 1916. The season ended with Kendall producing an undefeated 10-0 record, and laying claim to the unofficial title of “state champions.”

While the team turned in their uniforms that season, a few Tulsa businessmen wanted one more game for the Kendall team, against the fabulous Irish of Notre Dame. How close Kendall came to playing Notre Dame in the finale of the 1916 season probably will never be known, but a definite move was underway with some of the town’s wealthiest citizens reportedly backing the promotion.

Prior to the 1917 season, McBirney went back to his bank, and Schmidt, an assistant coach under McBirney, went to fight in World War I, as did a number of players. As a result, the 1917 season was a rough one for Kendall College.

Hal Medford took the coaching reins, but enrollment dropped drastically as did the male population. With only two varsity players available, Medford took the initiative to recruit players from Kendall Academy to fill the roster. The team had many weak areas and Medford had a hard time finding players to strengthen those areas. The team went without a win, thus it was called “the season that fell victim to the Kaiser’s war.”

By 1919, the Presbyterians were back in full force and primed for a comeback. Schmidt came back from the war ready to coach, and McBirney joined him as an assistant coach this time. All the players from previous years were back now, including Grove, and optimism was high.
Schmidt, who led the 1921 team to a 6-3 record, was preparing for the 1922 season when he was named the head coach at the University of Arkansas.

Enter the name Howard Acher. When he took over the position, Acher saw great potential in his team and wanted to publicize it by creating a new identity with a new nickname. Sports writers and others had called the school by any number of names from the Presbyterians to the Orange and Black, to the Kendallites.

After an opening day win against a strong Texas Christian University team in 1922, Acher put his mind to work. The press had claimed that the Kendall football team blew through its opponents like a tornado. So, it figured that Tornadoes, would be the nickname with “golden” added to identify the color of the uniforms. However, it was later found that Georgia Tech had claimed that name, so from tornado it was evolved meteorologically to a hurricane. Thus the squad voted, and the name “Golden Hurricane” became the new team moniker with the gold added because of the jersey color.

TU lived up to its nickname as the Golden Hurricane blew through the Texas A&M defense in the next game with pass after pass from quarterback Rex Thomas. TU won its first game as the Golden Hurricane by a score of 13-10.

A perfect 9-0 record in 1924 was followed with two straight losing seasons, and after the 1924 season Acher resigned his position as head coach. His replacement was a shock to everyone as Elmer “Gloomy Gus” Henderson was chosen to take over the coaching reins. The selection of Henderson wasn’t as much of a surprise as was his acceptance of the offer. He was coming from a program at the University of Southern California where, “one All American was in the game, and his substitute on the bench was an All American.” No one could understand why he would leave such a program. But the reason was simple, his lucrative contract at Tulsa.

Known as “Gloomy Gus” because of his pessimism when speaking for publication, he found success easy at Tulsa. He taught his team five new formations, and put the team back on its feet after only three wins over the previous two seasons. His first few seasons resulted in 13 wins and four losses, and by 1927, Golden Hurricane football was well on its way to recovery.

In 1928, prosperity in America and the success of Tulsa football, inspired Henderson to dream of a new stadium. He took his dream

It was Nov. 13, 1915 when Tulsa used the “tower play” against Missouri School of the Mines. The play calls for one player to jump on a teammates’ shoulders to catch a pass. It worked in a 117-0 win. In 1916, the play was banned.
The first game in Skelly Stadium was played on Oct. 4, 1930, as Tulsa defeated Arkansas 26-6.

to the rich oilmen of Tulsa, and they supported it. A short time later, Henderson saw his dream come true. The University of Tulsa football team had a new home to go along with the new philosophy and nickname.

Only 12 football players made the trip to Stillwater on Oct. 22, 1927, and Tulsa came away victorious 28-26.

Tulsa Football Gets a New Home

The 1930 season saw Coach Henderson’s dream of a new home for Tulsa football become a reality. Though the Depression had hit hard, the need for a new stadium was growing by the day.

McNulty Park, the original home of the Golden Hurricane, had become archaic by modern collegiate standards. In actuality, it was a baseball field that only measured 90 yards. This meant teams had to cross the goal line once, place the ball back on the 10 yard line, and cross the goal line again in order to score.

By 1930, the new stadium had been approved and funding for the $300,000 project had been acquired, so there could be no stopping. The stadium was built to hold 15,000 spectators, and the north and south ends were left open for future growth. Capacity now stands at 40,235. The stadium was named after William G. Skelly, a local oilman, who donated $125,000 to the project. The balance was raised by Tulsa businessmen by organizing the Stadium Corporation of Tulsa.

The stadium was dedicated at the 1930 season opener against Arkansas. The Golden Hurricane christened their new home with a 26-6 victory.

One of the mainstays for the Golden Hurricane during this transition was Chet Benefiel who played for TU from 1928 to 1931. The halfback’s exploits on the football field was said to have spurred the support for TU football that resulted in the building of Skelly Field. Benefiel earned honorable mention All-America honors in 1930, and captained two teams. He was Oklahoma Back of the Year in 1929, and was selected to the All-Oklahoma team in 1929 and 1930.

As the Hurricane adapted to its new surroundings, the team’s prosperity grew. Henderson’s 1933 team was the highlight of the decade. The Golden Hurricane played seven games that season, posting victories over rivals Oklahoma, Kansas and Arkansas. The Hurricane also soundly beat Oklahoma Central, Washburn and George Washington. The lone setback TU suffered was at the hands of Texas A&M. Wins over such strong competition caused the team of 1933 to be called one of the best in Tulsa football history.

When Henderson decided to leave his coaching post in 1935, TU went in search of a successor. What they found was yet another Rose Bowl champion coach from Southern Methodist University named Vic Hurt. At first, Hurt didn’t accept the position, but with some persuasive recruiting talk and a visit to campus, he accepted.

Hurt’s tenure lasted three seasons and after the 1938 season, he stepped down to take the head coaching post at Kansas.

Former TU player Chet Benefiel moved up from his freshman coaching position to be Hurt’s successor. In 1940, Benefiel led the Hurricane to share the Missouri Valley Conference Championship in 1940. However, his contract was not renewed for the next season. As a result, Tulsa hired Henry Frnka who would lead the Hurricane through one of the most successful decades in Tulsa football history.

Tulsa Goes to Five Straight New Years Day Bowl Games — The First School to Accomplish that Feat

The 1940s saw great development in the strength and notoriety of the University of Tulsa Golden Hurricane. Players like Glenn Dobbs, Sax Judd, Bobby Jack Stuart and N.A. Keithley, combined with the coaching of Frnka meant five straight bowl berths. Tulsa became the first school to go to five straight New Years Day Bowl Games, starting with the Sun Bowl on January 1, 1942. Two Sugar Bowls, the Orange Bowl and Oil Bowl followed.

Frnka brought a fervent love of the game and a strong desire to learn as much as he could about the game to Tulsa. He built a national football powerhouse en route to a career record of 40-9-2 in his five years.

The bowl appearances began in 1941 as the Hurricane posted a 7-2 regular season record. By early December, there had been no talk of a bowl bid for the Hurricane. A 13-6 loss to Arkansas seemed to have dashed any bowl dreams the team may have had. However, on December 4, word came that TU had in fact been invited to the Sun Bowl to play Texas Tech in El Paso, Texas on January 1, 1942.

Tech was favored in the game, but that fact did not intimidate the Hurricane. As the waning minutes of the game approached and the game still scoreless, Dobbs connected with Judd who fell over the goal line for the games only points. Tulsa emerged victorious from its first bowl game.
Tulsa’s bowl dynasty gained strength in 1942. At the end of the regular season, the Hurricane had the only perfect record in college football going at 10-0.

It had been rumored that the Hurricane was in line for the Rose Bowl, but when the invitation came, it was from New Orleans and the Sugar Bowl. Tulsa’s opponent would be Tennessee.

Tulsa struck first in that January 1, 1943 game. On TU’s second possession, Dobbs went to work picking apart the Vols’ defense to put the Hurricane on top 6-0. As the game went on, TU saw its lead dissipate. The Volunteers pulled to within one point just before halftime.

A safety and another Tennessee touchdown in the second half gave the Vols a 14-7 victory, and ending Tulsa’s hope of going 11-0 on the season and being able to claim the nation’s number one ranking. Tulsa ended the season 10-1 and ranked fourth in the nation.

The 1943 season saw Tulsa receive a second straight invitation to the Sugar Bowl. This time the opponent would be Georgia Tech.

After the Tulsa offense failed to gain a first down, Clyde LeForce faked a field goal and threw the ball to Ed Shedlosky for a 6-0 Tulsa lead on the first Hurricane possession. At the start of the second quarter, TU struck again on a Jimmy Ford 76-yard touchdown run putting TU in command 12-0. Then, the Yellow Jackets got on the scoreboard making it a 12-7 game. By halftime, the score stood at 18-7.

As the second half began, the Yellow Jackets began a comeback that broke the backs of the Hurricane. Tech quickly scored a touchdown to bring the score to 18-13. A 78-yard drive hammered the final nail in the Hurricane’s coffin as the game ended in a 20-18 heartbreaking defeat.

As the next season took shape, TU was looking good for a fourth straight bowl game. Tulsa’s wish came true when the Hurricane received word that they’d have a chance to avenge the previous year’s bowl loss to Georgia Tech. This time Tulsa would face Tech in the Orange Bowl on January 1, 1945.

Tulsa scored two first quarter touchdowns and added a third TD in the third quarter before Tech was able to get on the scoreboard. Tech had a third period score and each team scored once more in the final quarter, as Tulsa held on for a 26-14 win.

Coming off that bowl victory, TU was hungry for another, and that hunger grew as the 1945 season began. Hopes of another big bowl appearance were strong, but setbacks near the end of the season deflated those hopes somewhat. However, although that loss ended Tulsa’s bowl appearances for a time, the accomplishment of having gone to five straight bowl games put The University of Tulsa on the college football map. The Frnka era also ended with the Oil Bowl game. But, his contributions to Tulsa kept alive a tradition of quality football that ranks with some of the best in the country that carried into the 1950s.

The Bowl Legacy Continues

J.O. “Buddy” Brothers moved into the head coaching position in 1946 and took the Hurricane program into the 1950s, but not before posting a 9-1 record in 1946. Tulsa hit a low point in 1948 with an 0-9-1 record, but two years later Tulsa bounced back with a 9-1-1 mark in 1950.

The highlight of the 1950s was Tulsa’s visit to the Gator Bowl following the 1952 season where they met a strong Florida team. That season, the Hurricane posted an 8-2-1 record as TU renewed their bowl tradition.

Several players played key roles in the success of that 1952 team. Of course, it all started with inspiration from Coach Brothers, who was born with no left hand. He inspired his players with his courage and determination not to allow his handicap to get in the way. Tom Ham, a player for Brothers on that 1952 team, once said “coach Brothers showed his toughness every day at practice.” His toughness spurred the Hurricane to success in 1952.

Ellis Jones, a one armed guard, was named as a Football All-American in 1945.
Coach Brothers was voted Missouri Valley Coach of the Year in 1949 and 1951. His Hurricane teams had a career record of 26-5-1, winning two Missouri Valley Conference championships.

Tulsa was also blessed with exceptional talent in 1952. Tommy Hudspeth, Marvin Matuszak and Howard Waugh were tri-captains. Hudspeth was a strong defensive back for the Hurricane and was selected to the All-Oklahoma decade football team of the 1950s.

Matuszak, hailed as one of the best linemen in Tulsa history, was the first Hurricane player to twice be named first team All-America. Waugh was a record-setting running back. He led the nation in rushing with 1,372 yards and averaging 6.8 yards per rush.

These three men led a strong Hurricane team into the Florida game. From the time the Hurricane took the field against Florida in the Gator Bowl, they knew they were in for a battle. Florida scored the first time they had the ball, and again on a 37-yard pass play in the second quarter.

When TU took the field for the second half, the Hurricane constructed a drive of 73 yards for their first score pulling the Hurricane within a touchdown at 14-7. Tulsa’s second scoring drive covered 46 yards, capped by Waugh leaping into the end zone after the Hurricane recovered a fumble at the Gators’ 46-yard line. However, Tom Miner’s PAT went wide left leaving Florida with a one-point lead, 14-13.

TU had one final scoring opportunity after another Florida fumble with six minutes remaining in the game. The Hurricane traveled to the Gators’ 4-yard line, but had to settle for a field goal attempt that missed, allowing Florida to hold on for a 14-13 victory. Although Tulsa lost that bowl game, the 1952 team and those previous to it had some of the best players in Tulsa history.

Passing was the Name of the Game in 1960’s

Although the 1963 season produced only a 5-5 record, Tulsa’s offense, spearheaded by quarterback Jerry Rhome, averaged 199.3 yards passing per contest.

Until 1964, college football was dominated by running attacks. The nation saw Tulsa’s vaunted offensive attack in 1964 as the best passing team the nation had ever seen.

For 30 years teams avoided passing the ball because they thought running the ball was a better way to play the game.

What took years for college football to develop, Rhome and company obliterated in two years. In 1964, the Rhome-Twilley connection broke 20 NCAA records for total offense, passing, receiving and scoring. The notoriety those impressive statistical numbers gave the two Hurricane standouts helped lead them to back-to-back Heisman Trophy runner-up finishes, Rhome in 1964 and Twilley in 1965.

Dobbs obviously didn’t believe in the ground attack philosophy. He was one of the Hurricane’s most prolific passers himself, so it’s no wonder he brought his aerial philosophy back to Tulsa. Under Dobbs’ guidance, the Hurricane offense passed 52 percent of the time, well above the 29 percent Tulsa’s opponents were averaging.

Behind that strong offense, the 1964 team won all but two regular season games leaving the Hurricane with an 8-2 record and an invitation to the Bluebonnet Bowl in Houston, Texas to face Mississippi.

In that game, Tulsa dominated with its passing game as the Hurricane came from behind to re-establish themselves as a strong bowl team by winning 14-7, and finishing the season with a 9-2 mark.

The 1965 season saw a quarterback named Billy Guy Anderson rise up to lead the Hurricane. It wasn’t long before Anderson started breaking the records Rhome had set the year before. Anderson was the nation’s leading passer as he took Tulsa to yet another Bluebonnet Bowl.

Twilley was more of a threat than ever as he put his team and NCAA records of the previous year to shame. He caught 134 passes for 1,779 yards and 16 touchdowns in 1965, and came up just short in the Heisman Trophy balloting, as did Rhome the year before, finishing second to USC’s Mike Garrett.

The Golden Hurricane went into the Bluebonnet Bowl against Tennessee with an 8-2 record hoping to repeat the success of its previous Bluebonnet Bowl appearance. However, things were rough for the Hurricane this time, as Tulsa could cross the Volunteers’ 20-yard line only twice.

Tennessee jumped out to a 14-0 lead as they capitalized on two Tulsa fumbles. They also returned a punt for a third score, and turned an interception into their fourth score. The volunteers put the game out of reach on their last touchdown in the third quarter. Tennessee won the game 27-6.
In the 1960s, Tulsa took the collegiate passing game to a level never seen before. The Hurricane averaged nearly 318 yards in 1964, and increased that average to 346 yards a year later. Under the tutelage of Dobbs, it was Rhome, Anderson and Twilley who helped revolutionize the way college football was played.

NFL Talent Flourishes

The 1970s continued the wealth of talent going through the Hurricane program and entering the professional ranks. Some of the players Tulsa turned out that decade went into the NFL and became legends of the game. Names like Steve Largent and Drew Pearson went on to successful careers in the NFL.

When F.A. Dry took over as head coach at mid-season 1972, replacing Claude Gibson after six games, he was faced with the immediate challenge of creating an understanding of his philosophy. That philosophy. He believed that strong organization was key the to a successful team.

From the moment Dry took the helm, things began to improve for the Hurricane. His first game came the night after he accepted the head coaching position. Before that game, TU had gone 1-5, but upset Louisville and won its final two games to post a 3-2 record under Dry, and 4-7 on the year. It would be the only year during Dry’s four-and-a-half year tenure, that the Hurricane would suffer a losing season. A year later, Dry led Tulsa to a 6-5 record and first place in the Missouri Valley Conference. The 1976 season was the highlight of the Dry Era as he coached the team to a 7-4 record, a Missouri Valley Conference championship, and a berth in the first Independence Bowl where the Hurricane faced McNeese State University.

Things looked promising for the Hurricane at first as they constructed a 65-yard drive capped by a Thomas Bailey one-yard jaunt into the end zone for the first TU score, but at halftime, Tulsa clung to a slight 7-6 lead.

As the second half started, McNeese State produced a 65-yard scoring drive of their own, topped with a two-point conversion giving them the lead 14-7. The Hurricane scored on a blocked field goal attempt, but the PAT was no good, so the Hurricane stayed a point shy of the lead at 14-13.

After Tulsa made a fourth quarter 38-yard field goal to go ahead 16-14, TU seemed to have the game in the palm of their hands, but McNeese State answered by putting together an 80-yard scoring drive during the final two minutes that put the Hurricane down to defeat 20-16.

Dry made great strides in revitalizing Hurricane football. During his tenure, he posted a 31-18-1 record, and coached many standout players. Twenty-seven of them went into the pro ranks most of which were drafted.

One player who wasn’t drafted, turned out to be one of the best NFL receivers of all-time. Drew Pearson signed a free agent contract in 1972 with the Dallas Cowboys where he established himself as one of the best receivers in National Football League history.

Steve Largent, who would become an NFL Hall of Fame inductee, was favorably compared to Howard Twilley while at Tulsa. In 1974 and again in 1975, Largent led the nation in touchdown receptions with 14 touchdowns each year. He was a two-time selection for the all-MVC team and was named to the Associated Press first team All-American squad in 1975. Largent averaged 17.5 yards per catch for his career, and caught 51 passes for 1,000 yards his senior season.

In 1977, offensive lineman Steve August was a first round draft selection of the Seattle Seahawks.

These players and others, along with the man who coached them made a mark on Tulsa football history. Some made a mark on the NFL as well. The teams of the 1970s helped Tulsa build a reputation for developing quality players who can make a difference on a team.

Skelly Stadium was expanded to 40,235 seats in 1964.

No Justice

John Cooper took over the Tulsa football program in 1977, and suffered through a 3-8 campaign, but in 1978 he rebounded the troops for an impressive 9-2 record.

Perhaps one of the best football teams was assembled in 1982. The only blemish on the season was a loss to nationally-ranked Arkansas. However, Tulsa’s 10-1 season and top-20 national ranking was not good enough to impress Bowl scouts.

In that same season, college football fans new about a tandem of running backs at SMU, nicknamed the Pony Express ññ Eric Dickerson and Craig James. But what college football fans may not have known was that Tulsa has the only other pair of running backs in the country to rush for over over 1,000 yards each — Micheal Gunter and Ken Lacy. In a takeoff of the Pony Express, Tulsa’s tandem was dubbed the “Palomino Express”.

That season, Tulsa was not the only 10-1 team snubbed from the Bowl picture, as New Mexico was in the same situation as the Hurricane. Tulsa and New Mexico fans cried out for justice, and Justice is just what they received.

Tulsa and New Mexico would square off in the Justice Bowl on December 19, 1982. At 1:15 p.m. that afternoon, radio stations in the two cities carried the play-by-play of a fictitious matchup between the two schools. In Tulsa, the Hurricane would win the game, and in New Mexico the Lobos triumphed.

Bowl Games Close out 1980s, Usher in the ‘90s

Coach Cooper enjoyed a successful tenure taking Tulsa football into the 1980s, while a former Tulsa quarterback would take Hurricane football out of the ‘80s and into the 1990s. When Dave Rader became head coach in 1988, he became an expansion of Tulsa football’s past.

Between Cooper and Rader, Tulsa had two coaches for a total of three seasons. Don Morton was the head coach in 1985 and 1986, while George Hanshaw coached the Hurricane for the 1987 season.

Under Rader, Tulsa football experienced a roller coaster ride. The highest points were two bowl games — 1989 Independence Bowl and 1991 Freedom Bowl.

In 1989, the Hurricane posted a 6-5 regular season mark, and represented the Independent Football Alliance at the Independence Bowl, where the Hurricane faced a strong Oregon team from the PAC-10. The Ducks had a second-place conference finish, and was a 16-point favorite, but TU obviously didn’t gamble. TU gave the Ducks all the fight they could handle.

Tulsa struck first on a one-yard TD run from Brett Adams, but Oregon bounced back as they put together scoring drives of 54 and 79 yards of their own to take the lead 10-7. The Hurricane took a 17-10 lead into halftime on a field goal and a blocked punt return for a touchdown.

Tulsa scored once more in the third quarter to build their lead to 24-10, but Oregon came back scoring two quick touchdowns to knot the game at 24. At time wound down in the fourth period, the officials ruled against TU on a fumble recovery allowing the Ducks to continue a drive that ended with a final field goal and a victory. Though the Hurricane suffered a heartbreaking loss, that bowl game allowed TU to get back into the college football spotlight.

That spotlight continued to shine in the 1991 season as Tulsa produced a 10-2 season and a number 21 ranking in the final Associated Press football poll. A season that saw the Hurricane upset 15th-ranked Texas A&M 35-34 at Skelly Stadium, and post a come-from-behind 13-10 victory over Southern Mississippi in the “snow bowl” was capped by an invitation to the Freedom Bowl in Anaheim, California, where Tulsa met San Diego State and star running back Marshall Faulk.

At halftime, the two teams went into the locker room deadlocked at 10-10. In the second half, the Tulsa defense became a wall that the Aztecs offense couldn’t penetrate, holding them to just 83 yards of total offense.

Late in the game with the Hurricane up by three points, San Diego State muffed a punt at their own eight-yard line resulting in a Tulsa recovery. Two plays later, the Hurricane scored to make the final score 28-17. That Hurricane team went down in Tulsa football history as one of only five teams to have a 10-win season.

Eight Tulsa players from that team went into the NFL, including the likes of quarterbacks T.J. Rubley and Gus Frerotte, lineman Jerry Ostroski, receiver Chris Penn, and defensive stalwarts Barry Minter and Tracy Scroggins.

Since 1991, Tulsa football has been in a transition period, moving from a football independent to the Western Athletic Conference. Tulsa became a member of the WAC in 1996, and had its best season of league play in 2001, winning four games.

Tulsa football did not enjoy much success in the 1990s but as history has proven, success was not far away.
Tulsa Goes to Seven Bowl Games In Last Nine Years

The Golden Hurricane won the 2005 Conference USA Championship in its first season as a league member.

The Steve Kragthorpe Era began with a bang in 2003, as the Golden Hurricane had its first winning season and first bowl appearance in 12 years. Tulsa posted an 8-5 overall record, and placed second in the WAC with a 6-2 mark.

In his first year as head coach, Kragthorpe led Tulsa to the biggest turn-around in college football with a seven-win improvement from the previous season. Tulsa made the school’s 12th bowl appearance as the Hurricane played Georgia Tech in the Humanitarian Bowl on January 3, 2004. Tulsa football returned to its roots in 2003 as the Golden Hurricane became an offensive juggernaut, scoring over 30 points in seven games and averaging 30.8 points per game.

With an 8-5 record in 2003, Tulsa’s seven-win improvement from the previous year was the biggest turn-around in college football for that season.

Although Tulsa only posted four wins in 2004, including two overtime losses, junior Ashlan Davis, a junior college transfer, made NCAA history becoming the first player to run-back five kickoff returns for touchdowns in a single season. He broke the previous NCAA mark of three.

The 2005 season began another new era for the Hurricane as Tulsa officially became a member of Conference USA on July 1, 2005. It would be a year to remember in the first as a C-USA member.

In conference action, Tulsa defeated the preseason favorite to win the C-USA East, Southern Miss, as well as the preseason #3 team in the East Division, Memphis, in the regular season en route to posting a 6-2 league record, winning the C-USA West Division title and playing in the inaugural Conference USA Football Championship Game presented by Xbox 360.

Tulsa captured a 44-27 win in the league championship game over UCF in Orlando, Florida, on Dec. 3, 2005, and received an invitation following the game to play in the AutoZone Liberty Bowl in Memphis, Tennessee.

Tulsa was matched up against former Western Athletic Conference rival Fresno State in the Liberty Bowl game. Tulsa amassed 430 yards in the game and scored 14 points in the final 10:35 of the game to capture a 31-24 victory over the Bulldogs in front of 54,894 fans.

The Hurricane finished the season with an overall 9-4 record as senior All-American Garrett Mills became the single-season receiving leader in NCAA history for tight ends.

In 2006, Tulsa made its second straight bowl appearance, a feat not accomplished since back-to-back Bluebonnet Bowl appearances in 1964 and ’65. The Hurricane played in the Bell Helicopter Armed Forces Bowl and finished the season with an 8-5 record.

The 2007 campaign, the first for former Hurricane defensive coordinator Todd Graham as head coach, proved to be a record-setting season for the Golden Hurricane. Tulsa set 29 school records, 15 C-USA marks and four NCAA records, en route to leading the nation in total offense with 543.9 yards behind Wuerffel Trophy Award winner Paul Smith at quarterback. Tulsa met up with Bowling Green of the Mid-American Conference in the GMAC Bowl and came away with the largest margin of victory in NCAA Bowl history with a 63-7 win over the Falcons. With a 10-4 record, this Tulsa team became one of only six in school history to reach 10 wins.
A year later, the Hurricane won a school record 11 games by posting an 11-3 mark in 2008, established more school records, won the C-USA West Division title and made its’ second straight appearance in the GMAC Bowl, defeating No. 22-ranked Ball State by a score of 45-13.

For the second consecutive season, Tulsa again led the nation in total offense with 569.9 yards per game. The Hurricane scored a school record 661 points, while finishing second nationally in scoring with a 47.2 average. Senior running back Tarrion Adams became the school’s single-game, single-season and career record-holder for rushing, while senior placekicker Jarod Tracy set the all-time scoring record.

Only 10 times in NCAA history has a school led the nation in total offense in back-to-back years. Tulsa has done it three of those 10 times (1951-52, 1964-65, and 2007-08).

Tulsa captured its third 10-win season in four years with a 10-3 record in 2010. The season was highlighted with one of the most prestigious wins in school history, a 28-27 road win over Notre Dame, as well as a 62-35 victory against 24th-ranked Hawaii in the Sheraton Hawaii Bowl.

Receiver and kick return specialist Damaris Johnson became the NCAA’s all-time record-holder for career all-purpose yards (7,796) and kickoff return yards (3,417). He went on to earn second-team Associated Press All-America honors, while Tulsa finished the season ranked 24th in the final AP poll.

Tulsa alumnus Bill Blankenship took over as head coach in January 2011 and led the Hurricane to an 8-5 record and the school’s seventh bowl game in nine years against a schedule that featured four teams ranked among the top-7 in the nation. Tulsa faced #1 Oklahoma, #7 Oklahoma State and #4 Boise State in three of the first four weeks of the season, while #7 Houston closed out the regular season for the Hurricane.
Tulsa’s Bowl Games

1942 Sun Bowl
Tulsa 6, Texas Tech 0
El Paso, Texas
January 1, 1942 • Attendance: 12,000

Tulsa earned its first bowl bid with a 7-2 regular season record. Tulsa’s only losses were against Texas Christian, 6-0, and Arkansas, 13-6, in Henry Frink’s first season as head coach.

The game with the Red Raiders, which was played before a partisan Texas crowd, proved to be a defensive struggle. Tulsa’s defense held Tech to four first downs and 104 yards of total offense. In the first half, the Raiders pushed the ball to the Tulsa 15-yard line, but the Hurricane defense forced Tech to try a field goal, which missed and resulted in a scoreless first half.

After intermission, Tulsa’s Glenn Dobbs punted the ball from the Hurricane 14-yard line out of Tech’s end zone, giving Tulsa the momentum. Late in the game, Tulsa mounted a 71-yard touchdown drive behind the passing of Dobbs, who finished the day with 239 passing yards.

With only a few minutes remaining, Dobbs passed to Sax Judd for a 32-yard score, but Dobbs’ PAT attempt was blocked. Tulsa intercepted a Tech pass to preserve Dobbs’ points to end any hopes of a Tulsa victory.

1943 Sugar Bowl
Tennessee 14, Tulsa 7
New Orleans, Louisiana
January 1, 1943 • Attendance: 70,000

Tennessee nosed out Tulsa, 14-7, in the ninth Sugar Bowl football game before 70,000 fans on a beautiful sunny afternoon.

Tulsa scored first on an aerial march of 60 yards headed by All-American Glenn Dobbs early in the second period. Dobbs threw to end Cal Purdun for the score, while Clyde LeForce kicked the extra point. Later in the same period Tennessee countered with six points of their own and at halftime Tulsa held a slim 7-6 advantage.

The Volunteer’s power told the story in the second half, as Tennessee scored a safety by blocking one of Dobbs’ punts to take the lead in the third period, 8-7. The Volunteers added another touchdown by its powerful running game in the fourth quarter.

With Tennessee leading 14-7 in the waning minutes of the game, the Hurricane drove to the UT 11-yard line and was within one play of a tie, before Tennessee’s Bill Nowling intercepted an N.A. Keithley pass to end any hopes of a Tulsa victory.

1944 Sugar Bowl
Georgia Tech 20, Tulsa 18
New Orleans, Louisiana
January 1, 1944 • Attendance: 69,000

Tulsa made its second straight trip to the Sugar Bowl but failed in its bid for a victory over Georgia Tech in front of 69,000 fans.

For the first three periods and past the middle of the fourth, Tulsa clung to the lead. But in the end, Tulsa could not withstand an offensive attack led by Tech All-American Eddie Prokop who led the 72-yard drive that gave the Yellow Jackets a 20-18 decision.

Tulsa stopped a Tech drive following the opening kickoff, and from their own 14-yard line marched 86 yards to score in the first five minutes. A fake field goal by Clyde LeForce ended up in a TD pass to Ed Shedlosky. TU tailback Jimmy Ford ran around left end for a 79-yard touchdown on the first play of the second quarter for a 12-0 Hurricane lead.

Prior to halftime, Tech scored on a 71-yard drive, followed by a six-yard TD run by TU’s LeForce to give the Hurricane an 18-7 halftime lead. Tech made it 18-13 in the third period, and put together a 79-yard drive for a two-point lead in the final quarter. Tulsa could get only as close as the Tech 34-yard line before the final horn sounded.

Prokop gained 199 yards on 29 carries for Georgia Tech, while Tulsa’s Ford had 119 yards on 14 carries.

1945 Orange Bowl
Tulsa 26, Georgia Tech 12
Miami, Florida
January 1, 1945 • Attendance: 29,426

Tulsa sought revenge against the Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets for the come-from-behind victory in the previous year’s Sugar Bowl. This time Tulsa handed the Jackets a 26-12 loss in front of 29,426 fans at the Orange Bowl.

The Hurricane jumped out to a 14-0 first quarter lead and held that same advantage at halftime. On Tulsa’s first play of the third quarter, the Hurricane used some razzle-dazzle as Perry Moss threw to Nip Goodnight at the 35-yard line, who then lateraled to Barney White, who sped straight down the north side line for six points, making the score 20-0.

Tech came back with six points of their own in the third period. Tulsa’s Camp Wilson quickly quieted the crowd taking the Tech kickoff on the 10-yard line and racing 90 yards for a 26-6 Tulsa lead. Georgia Tech added six points in the final quarter to pull within 14 points of the victorious Hurricane.

1946 Oil Bowl
Georgia 20, Tulsa 6
Houston, Texas
January 1, 1946 • Attendance: 27,000

The score remained 7-6 through three quarters, but Georgia threw a 47-yard touchdown pass on its second fourth quarter possession, and added a 68-yard punt return for a touchdown by Charlie Trippi. Tulsa had two more opportunities to score but failed.

Just as Georgia had capitalized on a poor punt, Tulsa capitalized on a fumble that was recovered at the Georgia 13-yard line. Five plays later Camp Wilson went over for the touchdown from one yard out giving Tulsa what would be their only score of the game.

The Gators scored the first time they had the ball, driving 78 yards in 11 plays. Florida scored again in the second period on a 37-yard pass play, capping an 80-yard, 13-play drive. But in the second half, Tulsa’s offense threw the Florida defense off balance with the running of Jake Roberts.

1953 Gator Bowl
Florida 14, Tulsa 13
Jacksonville, Florida
January 1, 1953 • Attendance: 30,015

Tulsa battled back from a 14-0 halftime deficit, but saw its brilliant rally fall one point shy as Florida escaped with a 14-13 victory in front of a Gator Bowl crowd of 30,015.

The Hurricanes put together drives of 73 and 46 yards in the second half. Roberts ran for a three-yard touchdown in the third quarter, followed by a Tom Miner extra point. Tulsa’s next touchdown drive began following a Florida fumble at their own 46-yard line. Howard Waugh went over from three yards out for the touchdown. Miner’s extra point attempt went wide to the left.

1964 BLUEBONNET BOWL
Tulsa 14, Mississippi 7
Houston, Texas
December 19, 1964 • Attendance: 50,000

Tulsa quarterback Jerry Rhome offset Mississippi’s quick, blitzing defense with a mixture of running and passing as the Hurricane came from behind to upset the Rebels, 14-7, in the Bluebonnet Bowl.

Rhome completed 22 of 36 passes for 252 yards and gained 29 yards on the ground. He was the unanimous selection for the most outstanding back. Tulsa defensive lineman Willie Townes, who harassed Rebel quarterback Jim Weatherley, was named the game’s outstanding lineman.

Ole Miss opened the scoring with a one-yard Weatherley run in the second quarter. Rhome answered on a fourth down situation with a one-yard run of his own with 6:15 remaining in the first half. The Tulsa drive covered 72 yards.

In the third quarter, Rhome threw 35 yards to flanker Eddie Fletcher for the go-ahead touchdown that proved to be the game-winner.

1965 BLUEBONNET BOWL
Tennessee 27, Tulsa 6
Houston, Texas
December 18, 1965 • Attendance: 40,000

Tennessee combined its error-forcing defense, opportunistic offense, and superior kicking with the rain and mud to hand Tulsa a 27-6 loss in the Bluebonnet Bowl. The Volunteers set the tempo by recovering three fumbles and intercepting four passes to frustrate Tulsa’s national passing champions.

Other than a 44-yard, 11-play touchdown drive in the closing minutes of the first quarter that saw Gary McDermott run in from one yard out, Tulsa did not cross the Tennessee 20-yard line until the last minute of the game.

Tennessee, who jumped out to a 6-0 lead, scored its first and second touchdowns on drives of 48 and 33 yards following Tulsa fumbles. Tennessee’s third touchdown came on a seven-yard drive after a 45-yard punt return.

The Volunteers led 20-6 at halftime and put the game out of reach with their final touchdown early in the third quarter, coming after another Tulsa turnover. Statistically, Tulsa outgained the Volunteers by 105 yards, including a 250 to 37-yard advantage in the passing department.

1976 INDEPENDENCE BOWL
McNeese St. 20, Tulsa 16
Shreveport, La.
December 13, 1976 • Attendance: 19,164

The inaugural Independence Bowl wasn’t decided until McNeese State fullback Oliver Hadnot scored the winning touchdown with 37 seconds remaining on the game clock, giving McNeese a 20-16 win.

The excitement began almost immediately as Tulsa completed a 65-yard drive for an opening drive score. Fullback Thomas Bailey’s one-yard run capped Tulsa’s scoring drive.

At halftime, Tulsa held onto a 7-6 lead. However, in the third quarter the Cowboys took a 14-7 lead with a 63-yard drive and two-point conversion.

On their next possession, McNeese attempted a 51-yard field goal that was blocked, recovered and returned by Tulsa’s Mel McGowen 65 yards for a score. The extra-point attempt was blocked and the Southland Conference champions led 14-3 with 4:07 remaining in the third period.

With 4:22 remaining, Tulsa appeared to have won the game when Steve Cox kicked a three-pointer from 38 yards out to put his team ahead, 16-14. However, McNeese drove 80 yards from their own 20-yard line in the last two minutes and Hadnot raced the final 25 yards for the winning score.

1989 Independence Bowl
Oregon 27, Tulsa 24
Shreveport, La.
December 16, 1989 • Attendance: 44,621

The PAC-10 Conference’s second-place team, the Oregon Ducks, entered the Independence Bowl against Tulsa as 16-point favorites, only to hang on for a controversial 27-24 win. The Hurricane went into the game without the services of All-America receiver Dan Bitson, who suffered numerous injuries in an automobile accident two weeks earlier.

The Hurricane scored first on a Brett Adams one-yard run. Oregon put together drives of 54 and 79 yards to take a 10-7 lead, until a Tulsa field goal of 26 yards by David Fuess knotted the score at 10-10 with just over two minutes to play in the first half.

Tulsa took the halftime lead, 17-10, on a blocked punt by Herbert Harvey. Derrick Williams picked up the ball and raced 21 yards for the score with 22 seconds left on the first half clock.

Adams added another one-yard touchdown run in the third period as Tulsa took a 24-10 lead. However, Oregon scored two touchdowns in a six-minute span late in the third quarter and early in the fourth.

With just over three minutes to play, an apparent Tulsa recovery of an Oregon fumble was overruled by the officials. Thus, the Ducks converted on a 20-yard field goal to capture a 27-24 victory.

1991 Freedom Bowl
Tulsa 28, San Diego State 17
Anaheim, Calif.
December 30, 1991 • Attendance: 34,217

Tulsa, making its second bowl appearance in three years and its first at-large showing since 1976, notched its first bowl victory since 1964 with a 28-17 win over San Diego State in the eighth Freedom Bowl.

Tulsa’s veteran offensive line opened huge holes for tailback Ron Jackson, who grabbed Most Valuable Player honors as he rushed by 211 yards and a Freedom Bowl record four touchdowns on 46 carries. The junior scored once in each of the four quarters, accounting for touchdown runs of 10, 6, 4 and 4 yards, respectively.

The teams were deadlocked at the end of the first and second quarters. Tulsa’s defense came alive after intermission holding the potent Aztec offense to just three points and 83 total yards.

Tulsa led 21-17 late in the game when Gus Frerotte’s booming 54-yard punt was mishandled by Aztec return specialist T.C. Wright at his own 8-yard line. Billy Cole recovered for Tulsa and the Hurricane scored two plays later to seal the win. The victory earned Tulsa a ranking of 21st in the final Associated Press and CNN/USA Today polls.

2003 Humanitarian Bowl
Georgia Tech 52, Tulsa 10
Boise, Idaho
January 3, 2004 • Attendance: 23,118

Tulsa won five straight games to end the regular season and claimed second place in the Western Athletic Conference. The prize was a trip to play Georgia Tech of the Atlantic Coast Conference in the Humanitarian Bowl. It would be the third meeting between the two school’s, and all three times in bowl games.

The game marked Tulsa’s first bowl appearance in 12 years and the eight wins was more than the previous three seasons put together. Although the Hurricane enjoyed its trip to Boise, Idaho, the game was another story. Despite trailing just 10-3 at halftime, Georgia Tech had controlled the first half out-gaining the Hurricane 129-20.

The second half was more of the P.J. Daniels show for Tech. The running back had 104 yards at halftime, and ended the game with 307 rushing yards and four touchdowns. While the Tulsa defense couldn’t stop Daniels, the Hurricane offense was giving the Yellow Jackets a short field with six lost fumbles. Six of Tech’s eight touchdown drives began inside the Tulsa 40-yard line, and four of those TDs coming after a Tulsa fumble.

Tech put up 42 second-half points and went on for a 52-10 victory, the most lopsided Bowl loss for the Hurricane in 12 postseason appearances.

GLENN DOBBS  •  A star tailback for the Golden Hurricane teams of 1940, '41, and '42, Glenn Dobbs was an All-America selection in 1942. One of the best passers and punters in college history, Dobbs led Tulsa to a 25-6 record with two post-season bowl games in his three seasons. He returned to TU as athletics director in 1955 after playing professional football and in 1961 was named Tulsa's head football coach. He was elected to the College Football Hall of Fame in 1980 and to the TU Athletic Hall of Fame in 1982.

ELLIS JONES  •  A courageous performer, Ellis Jones was the one-armed player who helped lead the University to three bowl appearances in 1942, '43, '44. He was the defensive standout in the 1945 College All-Star game against the Chicago Bears, collecting three tackles behind the line of scrimmage in the same series. A 1983 inductee into the TU Athletic Hall of Fame.

STEVE LARGENT  •  An All-America receiver at Tulsa, Steve Largent went on to a Hall of Fame career with the Seattle Seahawks. He was a two-time all-Missouri Valley Conference selection. As a senior in 1975, Largent caught 51 passes for 1,000 yards, 19.5 yards per reception and 14 touchdowns. As a junior, Largent caught 52 passes for 884 yards and 14 TDs. He had career totals of 136 receptions for 2,385 yards and 32 touchdowns. His jersey was retired on October 26, 2008.

MARVIN MATUSZAK  •  Possibly the top lineman in The University of Tulsa's history, Marvin Matuszak was a two-time first-team All-America choice in 1951 and '52. He was an all-Missouri Valley Conference pick as well and led the Golden Hurricane into the 1953 Gator Bowl against Florida. Matuszak was a longtime standout in both the National and American Football Leagues. He was inducted into the TU Athletic Hall of Fame in 1983.

FELTO PREWITT  •  Considered to be one of the top centers in Golden Hurricane history, Felto Prewitt starred on the bowl teams of 1943, '44, and '45. He gained first team All-America honors in 1945 and went on to play with the Baltimore Colts of the National Football League.

JERRY RHOME  •  Possibly the most polished passer in college football history, Jerry Rhome made a shambles of NCAA passing and total offense records in 1963 and 1964. He threw for a career 4,779 yards and 42 touchdowns. In 1964, when he passed for 2,870 yards and 32 TD’s, Rhome was the runner-up to Notre Dame quarterback John Huarte in the Heisman Trophy voting. He was selected as the Collegiate Player-of-the-Year in several polls and made nearly every All-America team. Elected to the TU Athletic Hall of Fame in 1984. He was a College Football Hall of Fame inductee in 1998.

HOWARD TWILLEY  •  A consensus All-America choice in 1965, Howard Twilley set nearly every Golden Hurricane receiving record and set most national marks. He followed Jerry Rhome as the runner-up in the Heisman Trophy voting in 1965, placing second to Southern California halfback Mike Garrett. He caught a career 261 passes for 3,343 yards and 32 touchdowns. Twilley was the captain of the Academic All-American team in 1965. He went on to star for the Miami Dolphins of the NFL. He was selected to the TU Athletic Hall of Fame in 1984 and was a College Football Hall of Fame inductee in 1992.

Conference History

In the early years, Tulsa competed in the Oklahoma Collegiate Conference for 11 seasons. Tulsa posted a 46-7-4 record and won five league titles. The Hurricane spent four seasons as members of the Big Four Conference, winning three conference championships while registering a 12-1-1 mark.

From 1935 to 1985, The University of Tulsa competed for the Missouri Valley Conference football championship. After becoming a member of the conference in 1934, Tulsa proceeded to win the league championship its first four years and eight of its first nine years in the conference.

In 50 years of competition in the Missouri Valley Conference, Tulsa won more conference championships than any other team in the history of the league. TU has to its credit 25 Missouri Valley Conference titles, including 19 outright titles and six co-championships.

Following the 1985 season, Tulsa withdrew its football membership from the Missouri Valley Conference. The league then closed down its operation of football as a conference sport. Before leaving the MVC, Tulsa won the final six league championships (1980-1985).

Tulsa played as an independent for 10 seasons before becoming a member of the Western Athletic Conference (WAC) beginning with the 1996 season, while the 2004 campaign was the last in the WAC for the Hurricane. Tulsa’s best finish in nine years in the WAC was second place with a 6-2 league record in 2003.

The 2005 season was the first for Tulsa in Conference USA, and the Golden Hurricane responded that season by winning the school’s first conference title since 1985.
