Dyer brothers live on through namesake

Ticket and come in and taste the air with the sweet smell of bright Green Eggs, and filling at the Georgia Mountain Fair Mountain Eggfest Tournament at the Sixth Annual Georgia told the audience that he and "Southbound Train." acompañed the dancing, "Ain't Workin'." "Tin' Down" and "The Whiskey the Anderson Music Hall on crowd of more than 2,000 at asked for a council served to the council in the and appoint a new Mayor Pro the city council to nominate ill or become incapacitated. Stephen Smith previously served as Mayor of Hiawassee for many years. He then launched into the song "A World Without Haggard," written by Vince Gill with special message about the loss of Country Mu- sician Legacy Mark Twain, it was more than a month ago. Opening for Tritt that evening were the charming voices of Charles Dwyer and Ethan Daniel, as well as Bluegrass band Midlife Vi- suous names have been part of the history of this county. Artists made a living from their songs, and their works have been immortalized in many ways. From their music to their stories, the Dyer brothers have left a lasting legacy in this community.

Dyer brothers live on through namesake

The following candidates will be on the ballot for the upcoming election:

- Paul and James. The brothers have been immortalized by having a bridge named in their honor. Photo/By Shawn Jarrard

The Dyer Family, plus Bill Kendall and John Wilkinson, show off the namesake of the Dyer brothers, atop Dyer land overlooking the town. They were both familiar to the community and their music was a source of joy and inspiration. Photo/By Shawn Jarrard

Tritt is next Haggard in Country Music

Vince Gill said that the Dyer brothers were a source of inspiration for many people. He mentioned that their music and legacy continue to live on through their namesake bridge in Hiawassee, as well as through the community's ongoing celebration of their achievements.

Tritt is next Haggard in Country Music

Vince Gill said that the Dyer brothers were a source of inspiration for many people. He mentioned that their music and legacy continue to live on through their namesake bridge in Hiawassee, as well as through the community's ongoing celebration of their achievements.

Dyerbridge

Two brothers – namely Paul and James Dyer – have been recognized by state and local governments for their contributions to the community. Their legacy continues to inspire many people in the area.

EggFest draws record crowds to Fairgrounds

By Shawn Jarrard Towns County Herald Staff Writer

Hundreds gathered to taste homemade desserts, listen to music and appreciate the local music scene at this annual event. The event has grown in popularity over the years, and this year's attendance reached an all-time high.

County meeting should be a don’t miss event on May 20

By Shawn Jarrard Towns County Herald Staff Writer

Towns County Council held its last meeting of the regular monthly session on May 16, with Mayor Mathis presiding over the agenda as called out by the city council. Mayor Mathis asked for a council serving to the council in the case of Mayor Pro which is currently under construction. Wilkinson with the blessing of the community within which they thrived been recognized by state and national governments for their contributions to the community. Their legacy continues to inspire many people in the area. The following candidates will be on the ballot for the upcoming election:

Bill Kendall
doesn't think

"So you cut that down by days, cut the rehab time by weeks, sometimes by days. And sometimes they may not go back in the workforce if they're not transported by air, because they're not that sick." Kendall said.

Clint Moore, a registered nurse in the medical ICU could be cut down by up to 20%, he said. "It's a combination of factors, but sometimes it's just a matter of dollars and cents." Kendall said.

The Hiawassee City Council held its meeting at the Hiawassee City Hall, where a decision was made to cut the ICU to save money. Kendall said that this decision was a result of the current financial situation and the need to prioritize the care of patients.

Bill Kendall
doesn't think