Mission Statement

Molloy College, an independent, Catholic college rooted in the Dominican tradition of study, spirituality, service, and community, is committed to academic excellence with respect for each person. Through transformative education, Molloy promotes a lifelong search for truth and the development of ethical leadership.
Letter from the President

As I begin my twelfth year at Molloy, I can say without hesitation that 2010-2011 was the most important year in my tenure and arguably one of the most significant in the College’s history. The opening of two new buildings reflects the culmination of all the Molloy community has accomplished over the years and is symbolic of our continued commitment to growing and improving Molloy, both for our students and for the communities we serve.

Our first residence hall can house more than 150 students and will add a new vitality to campus life. The students have embraced residence life, and it is tremendously rewarding to see the excitement on their faces.

The Public Square student center will serve as the hub of our new campus. The Public Square includes classrooms, study spaces, the information commons and dining facilities, to name but a few features. The Madison Theatre at the Public Square is a state-of-the-art performance center that will attract talented artists from around the world while also providing new space for a wide variety of College events.

Our enrollment climbed again last year, and that trend continued as we began the 2011-2012 school year. We launched a number of new academic programs during the year, and opened new offices and treatment centers for the Rebecca Center for Music Therapy and the Speech-Language Pathology Department. Molloy also hosted a number of high-profile speakers and conferences, continuing to enhance our reputation as an institution that is also committed to serving the community. Finally, our student-athletes continued to be strong competitors in a wide variety of sports, while maintaining the appropriate balance between academics, sports and a variety of other activities.

Just prior to going to press, we learned that Molloy has been named (for the third consecutive year) one of the best regional universities by U.S. News and World Report and a “Best in the Northeast” college by The Princeton Review. We also made a significant leap in the U.S. News and World Report rankings, moving from 67th to 52nd. The recognition confirms what the Molloy community has always known, and is now becoming increasingly apparent to the broader audience.

I know we are all looking forward to a new year filled with new facilities, new programs and a wealth of new accomplishments. That said, we should not forget that what makes Molloy special are our values, our traditions, and our ongoing commitment to the power of education to transform lives.

Thank you for making 2010-2011 another banner year for Molloy. I am confident that the current year will be even better.

Drew Bogner, Ph.D.
President

As we look back on the many accomplishments of the 2010-2011 academic year, one fact cannot be ignored—Molloy is changing. We are moving toward a future that will combine our new physical surroundings with our ongoing quest for academic excellence and our deeply rooted Dominican heritage. With the help of the Molloy community, we have reached the summit of just one of many mountains we as an institution will climb. We would be remiss if we did not take a moment, or two, to enjoy the view.
The New Face of Molloy

The College landscape has been forever changed by the welcome addition of two new buildings on campus – the Public Square student center, which houses the Madison Theatre, and Molloy’s first residence hall. These new buildings bring new dimensions to the campus while also providing additional ways for the community to become involved.

The Public Square building is a Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) certified structure. The building is not only home to our new theatre, it also houses classrooms, offices, our art gallery, the information commons/computer lab, study/meeting areas and additional dining facilities. This building serves students, faculty and employees as well as the community-at-large by providing various spaces for meetings, dialogue, and entertainment.

Our new three-floor, co-educational residence hall can house over 150 students. Students from all class years and majors now reside on campus. The building is equipped with double, single and suite-style rooms, bathrooms, laundry room, three study/recreational lounges, a main lobby area and a 24/7 security desk by the front door. Resident Advisors are employed in each wing to provide programming, enhance community, enforce policies and help residents find services they need.

The Madison Theatre is a 550-seat venue which resides in our new Public Square. The theatre is a state-of-the-art performance space with incredible acoustics. We anticipate offering lectures and discussions as well as hosting an entire theatre season filled with inspiring artistic performances from the world of dance, music and theatre. Our students will also have ample opportunity to use the space for performances of their own. Through both live performance and via modern media delivery, hundreds of thousands of Long Islanders will benefit from the educational and cultural offerings of this exciting facility.

The new facilities set the stage for the “new Molloy” providing space that enhances community and allows us to complete our transformational mission.
2010 was the International year of the Nurse, and it was only fitting that in September of 2010 we welcomed our very first doctoral candidates. Ten students began work toward their Ph.D.s, which will be the first doctorates awarded by the College. Our program, which was the culmination of over five years of preparation, will prepare nurses for leadership roles in academia, health policy formulation, healthcare administration and clinical practice. The curriculum is focused on theory, research, the humanities, and methodology.

Also in the fall we introduced two new treatment facilities. In October, Molloy’s Speech-Language Pathology Department opened a new facility located at 30 Hempstead Avenue in Rockville Centre. The speech center is a comprehensive facility providing diagnostic and therapeutic intervention for children and adults from infancy through geriatrics. Then in November the Rebecca Center for Music Therapy held an opening event for its new offices and treatment rooms located on the lower level of... the Wilbur Arts Center. The Rebecca Center provides music therapy services to children and adolescents diagnosed with developmental delays, autism, learning disabilities, neurological impairments, speech and language delays, physical disabilities, and emotional difficulties.

We had a number of new degree options approved during the course of the 2010-2011 year. The College now offers a Master’s in Speech-Language Pathology, and the first students entered the program this fall. Two new minors have also been added -- a minor in Sustainability Studies and a New Media minor. We continually seek to offer our students new and exciting choices that will give them a competitive edge upon graduation.

The National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE) Unit Accreditation Board voted to continue the Division of Education’s accreditation at the initial and advanced teacher preparation levels until fall 2017. We met or exceeded all NCATE standards and remain committed to producing quality teachers.
Molloy continued to demonstrate its position as a center for social discourse and discussion during the 2010-2011 academic year. We hosted a number of diverse events that provided opportunities for the surrounding community to become involved with the College. These were opportunities to hear well-known speakers and to learn about new concepts.

The inaugural St. Thomas Aquinas Lecture featured Father James Martin, the author of My Life with the Saints and, most recently, The Jesuit Guide to (Almost) Everything. Father Martin is also the culture editor of the Jesuit magazine America. A standing room only crowd greeted the very popular Jesuit priest as he delivered his lecture entitled, Laughing with the Saints: Joy, Humor, and Laughter in the Spiritual Life.

Our public programming on campus continued with Dr. Colin Beavan, a.k.a. “No Impact Man.” Dr. Beavan came to campus to help commemorate Earth Week at Molloy. He discussed the details of the year-long project in which he and his family went “off-the-grid” and attempted to live in the middle of New York City with as little environmental impact as possible.

New York Times best-selling author Malcolm Gladwell was the featured speaker at the 2011 Joe and Peggy Maher Leadership Forum. He addressed a capacity crowd as he spoke of the “Perils of Overconfidence.” Mr. Gladwell used examples from Civil War history to illustrate how the hubris of business executives ultimately led to the recent financial crisis in America. He stated that a heavy dose of ethics taught by business professors combined with faith-based education (at colleges like Molloy) may help to curtail a similar happening in the future. A panel discussion on the same topic followed the keynote address and featured members of our extended Molloy community.

Molloy’s Music Education Department hosted a three-day symposium on Sacred Harp music. Music educators from around Long Island and presenters from around the country, took part in the unique event. The Sacred Harp tradition was imported from Europe in the 1790s and represents a continuation of America’s oldest form of choral music education. The symposium was a wonderful opportunity to share insight into this unique style of music with the entire Molloy community.

Our Business Division once again held its innovative summer “boot camp,” attracting the best and brightest high school students from across Long Island who are considering careers in business. The students gave up a week of summer vacation to spend it on the Molloy campus, attending lectures, workshops and simulation sessions designed to give them a better taste of college life, as well as, an idea about what a career in business could do for them.
Beyond Academics

Molloy students continue to not only demonstrate their abilities in the classroom, but also in the sports arena as well. The 2010-2011 year had many highlights, both at the team level and for individual student athletes, many of whom were named to the All East Coast First and Second Teams.

Memorable team moments included:
- Baseball team won its first East Coast Conference regular-season title
- Rugby team won its first ever Long Island Cup
- Softball team won the East Coast Conference title

Our continued commitment to community service was demonstrated by many meaningful events on and off campus. For example, our annual BoxTown event, which benefits Bethany House and supports homeless women in our area, took place in April. We also continued to offer students many service-learning opportunities where they can earn credit while making a difference in many diverse communities. Our freshmen also continued their tradition of collecting supplies throughout the Village of Rockville Centre to benefit those in need. Our Women's Basketball team “adopted” a young girl named Jackie who is battling cancer, and the team continues to assist her and her family in many ways. The wonderful efforts of the Molloy community are truly too numerous to list.
