This study tour may include the following: A visit with a fashion designer and a fashion school, possible interactions with world fashion designers during the fashion week, fashion-focused tour of the Louvre Museum and all inspirational sites of the city of lights. Research historical textiles and apparel in the capital city of the world of fashion. The point of departure and return is via the Philadelphia International Airport.

Interested students can earn 3 credit hours as an elective and must enroll in the course: HMEC 424 during spring pre-registration period, from Nov. 3 – Nov. 25. This trip is open to fashionistas in all majors.

For information about this trip, please contact Dr. Adegoke, madegoke@desu.edu, to discuss all possibilities including costs, financing the trip, travel document requirements and other critical information and websites relating to the trip.

DURING SPRING BREAK 2016
On a Grand Tour of Italy
If you are interested in traveling for 10 days during spring break 2016, earning 3 credits from the art department, and touring cities and towns throughout Italy that focus on art, history, culture, fashion, design and food, then please contact Dr. Becker at dbecker@desu.edu as soon as possible so we may discuss the trip, cost, how to finance the trip, and the class you can enroll in during the registration period for spring semester 2016.

The tour will include Venice by plane, staying 2 full days while we wander through the cobble streets of Venice visiting world heritage sites, then on to Florence where the plazas could compete with museums for the number of sculptures displayed. From there, we will travel to Assisi after a side excursion to Pisa to see the famous leaning tower. From there, we will head south to Pompeii and Sorrento, the sleepy town on the cliffs of southern Italy. We will then head back north to Rome, where we will immerse ourselves in ruins, museums and the Vatican City, then we will fly back to Philadelphia just in time for classes the following Monday!
